FRIGID BLAST TIGHTENS ITS HOLD ON U. S.

City Feels Effects of New Cold Wave as Mercury Tumbles to 2 Below.

DRIFTS CLOSE BAY BRIDGE

Ice Gorges Piling Up in Ohio River, Threaten Flood; 36 Above at Miami.

Sub-zero weather gave Ohio and much of the nation another kick in the pants today as the frigid blasts refused to relinquish their hold on a score of states.

The newest cold wave from the west gave Mansfield a two below zero reading at 8 a. m. today while other Ohio cities reported similar marks. The mercury climbed to four above zero at noon.

There was no hope of relief from the zero cold before Saturday afternoon and when relief does come it will bring more snow with it, the weatherman said.

Ohio began to feel the effects of the continued sub-zero cold at the northern and southern extremities today. Ice gorges piled up in the Ohio river, threatening another disastrous flood like the one four years ago this month. The Sandusky bay bridge on the north was closed by snowdrifts seven feet high.

Sends Plow to Fight Drifts.

A large rotary snow plow from the Ashland division of the state highway department was to be taken to Sandusky today to aid in opening the Bay bridge. Four plows were unable to keep the drifts from piling up last night as a 30-mile wind whipped heavy snow across the frozen bay.

A number of cities along the Ohio river were faced with water shortages as the ice dams in the river caused the water level to drop below city supply intakes.

It was the first time since 1918 that serious ice gorges have formed in the river and engineers said a rapid thaw with rain would result in a flood.

The south, unaccustomed to severe cold, suffered even worse from the frigid weather than the middlewest. The mercury tumbled close to record lows as far south as Key West, Fla., and at Miami it was only 36 degrees above zero.

Phoenix Shivers, Too.

The mercury dipped to one above at Chattanooga, Tenn., the coldest spot in the south and one of the coldest in the nation. In the far southwest, Phoenix, Ariz., usually hot the year 'round, reported a low of 42 degrees.

The Mansfield area had a one-inch fall last night and today which caused no serious hazard. State and county highway plows were out all night and experienced little difficulty in keeping roads passable. Snow drifted badly, road officials said, but it was fluffy and there wasn't enough of it to make big drifts.

Japs Say U. S. Serves British as 'Watchdog'

Launch Bitter Attacks At Two Nations Because of Removal of German Seamen; Charge American Views 'Too Thick.'

BULLETIN

TOKYO—(INS)—Windows of the British consulate were smashed by members of a Japanese patriotic society today as indignation mounted over the removal by a British cruiser of 21 German seamen from the Japanese liner Asama Maru.

(By International News Service)

TOKYO—Japanese newspapers bitterly criticized the United States and Great Britain today, charging that a British cruiser halted and removed 21 German seamen from the Japanese liner Asama Maru only because London was convinced of American support.

(Editor's note: It was disclosed in San Francisco that the Japanese foreign office in Tokyo issued a drastic order forbidding Japanese vessels to transport German subjects of military age from the United States to the Far East.)

The newspaper Asahi Shimbun called attention to the fact that the Japanese-American commercial agreement, abrogated by the United States, expires tomorrow. It added:

"The helpless manner in which the Japanese diplomatic front has floundered cannot be condemned enough, but the attitude of the United States in taking on itself the role of watchdog for British interests in the Far East and acting as if it had the right to police the whole world is a bit too thick.

"The Asama Maru affair was possible only because the British were convinced of American support and thought the Japanese fleet was tied up by American transpacific strategy."

(Editor's note: Recent movements of American fleet units in Hawaiian waters and United States naval expansion plans in Washington have drawn sharp criticism from Japanese sources.)

"If Britain and the United States," Asahi continued, "have swallowed the propaganda that Japan is economically laid prostrate, and if they take to provoking Japan, both soon will realize that wrong recoils upon itself."

The same newspaper warned

GIVE M'GREGOR ENDORSEMENT

G. O. P. Heads in 17th Vote 7 to 2 to Back Candidacy of House Leader.

J. Harry McGregor of Coshocton today held the majority endorsement of Republican leaders in the 17th district for the G. O. P. nomination for congressman.

McGregor, majority leader in the house of representatives is one of the three Republicans seeking the 17th district post left vacant by the death Jan. 1 of William A. Ashbrook, Johnstown Democrat. Nominees will be selected at a special primary Feb. 6.

The other two are Col. Oliver H. Dockery, Newark, retired army officer, and Walter B. Woodward, Bellville Townsendite, who was defeated by Ashbrook in 1938.

Meeting in Mt. Vernon last night, Republican leaders from the six counties in the district gave McGregor seven votes, two of which were cast by proxy by Delaware county leaders, and two went for Dockery. Three blank votes were cast.

Attending the session called by State Central Committeeman Earl A. McFarland, were Ralph Hardy, Richland county executive committee chairman, and Atty. S. H. Cramer, secretary of the organization, along with representatives from Ashland, Coshocton, Licking, Knox and Delaware counties.

Dems Pow-Wow Tonight.

Tonight district Democratic leaders will caucus in Mt. Vernon for what is reported to be a meeting called for endorsing a Democratic congressional candidate.

The meeting was called by state Democratic committeeman E. B. Kallmerten for the purpose of endorsing delegates to the national convention this summer, he said.

Lined up on the Democratic side for the congressional seat are

LOCAL UNIONS OPPOSE LEWIS ON ROOSEVELT

47 Resolutions Proposing to Draft President for Third Term Before Miners.

9 STATES REPRESENTED

Movement Indicates CIO Chief May Have Big Controversy on Hands at Parley.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Forty-seven local union resolutions demanding that President Roosevelt be drafted for a third term went before the United Mine Workers' golden jubilee convention today in the face of opposition by John L. Lewis, the union's president.

The resolutions came from nine states and indicated that sharp dissent may be expected from some delegates if Lewis tries to obtain a convention vote attacking Mr. Roosevelt's administration and opposing his renomination.

The resolutions had been submitted by the local before Lewis broke openly with the New Deal.

Lewis predicted at yesterday's convention session that President Roosevelt would go down to "ignominious defeat" if he ran again, and charged that the Democratic party was "in default to the American people" for alleged failure to solve major national problems.

Lewis himself was proposed for president in another resolution, submitted by a local union. The Sharon, W. Va., local declared that its members "hoped to see the day come that we can have Mr. Lewis in the White House as president of our great nation."

The convention unanimously approved an attack on the Dies committee, investigating un-American activities, urged congress to discontinue it, and to divert its funds to the senate civil liberties committee, headed by Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, Prog., Wisconsin. Congress approved

Deutschland Back In Germany

The Deutschland

Escapes British searchers.

Nazis Prepare to Launch New, Bigger 'Deutschland'

Famous Pocket Battleship Back at Home Base, Berlin Says Larger Battleship to Get Her Name.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—The striking power of the German navy will shortly be considerably increased, it was disclosed today as the famous German pocket battleship Deutschland returned to its home base after conducting "trade warfare" in the Atlantic since outbreak of the European war.

Announcement of the return of the Deutschland was accompanied by official revelation that it will be renamed the Luetzow and that the name Deutschland will be conferred on a larger vessel.

This was regarded as an indication that a third 35,000-ton battleship will soon be launched.

According to German officials, Chancellor Hitler ordered the change in the sea raider's name on grounds that the "name Deutschland is being reserved for a bigger ship."

As a result of the shift the German heavy cruiser Luetzow also will be renamed.

In returning to its home base, the Deutschland escaped a British naval search conducted ever since the pocket battleship sank the British armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi early in the war with the loss of nearly all hands.

An authoritative statement on this point said:

"The Deutschland escaped the pursuit of numerous British forces.

"Germany will continue active trade war according to rules it deems right."

Meanwhile, it was understood that work is now under way on one 40,000-ton German battleship and another 45,000-ton vessel. The larger vessel probably will be the flagship of the German fleet and, it is understood, will be named the Friedrich Der Grosse.

JENKINS SAYS HE'LL RENEW REFUND FIGHT

Most Other Ohio Congressmen Give Up Hope to Obtain $1,300,000 Fund.

HOUSE SUSTAINS VETO

Motion to Refute President's Action Loses by Vote of 171 to 153—41 Short.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R., O.) charged today that President Roosevelt had "robbed" Ohio of $1,300,000 and pledged himself to fight "until Ohio gets justice" for the money withheld from the state in 1938 by the social security board.

Most other members of the Ohio delegation abandoned hope for a federal payment, estimated to amount to approximately $1,388,000, although a few hoped that the state would receive something.

Started In 1938.

In October, 1938, the social security board withheld the federal government's monthly payment to Ohio after charging the then governor, Martin L. Davey, with using the state social security setup for political purposes. Normally the federal government matches the funds paid out by the state in the social security program.

The fight to regain that payment began at the last session of congress. Mr. Roosevelt vetoed a bill that would have authorized the payment with a sharp message charging that such action would create a precedent "that would seriously endanger the success of the entire social security program."

Late yesterday, the house sustained the veto on a roll call vote. Although 171 voted to override the president and pass the bill and only 153 voted to sustain him, the motion required a two-thirds majority—212—and failed by 41 votes.

Hits 'Must' Democrats.

"The president robbed Ohio of $1,300,000," Jenkins said. "Every

Firemen Rescue Occupants of Blazing Apartment Building.

AKRON — (U.P.) — Fourteen persons were rescued by firemen early today when a business and apartment building in suburban Kenmore caught fire.

Members of three families living on the second floor were carried down ladders in the near-zero weather. They were given shelter by neighbors.

The two-alarm fire started in the basement from an overheated furnace. Damage was estimated at $2500, including damage to contents of a grocery and beauty parlor.

'DEAD ISSUE'

Morgenthau Says 'No One Has Whispered Taxes to Me.'

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said today that he "never saw a tax question so dead" in congress as President Roosevelt's proposal for a new national defense levy.

Morgenthau's statement came in reply to a press conference question asking if any treasury conferences were being held on the subject of raising $460,000,000 in new taxes to pay the increased cost of national defense.

"No one even has whispered taxes to me," Morgenthau said.

In recent testimony before a house appropriations subcommittee Morgenthau agreed that substantial savings could be made by cutting certain government expenditures.

DUTCH REJECT

Spurn Churchill's Call for 'United Front' of Neutrals.

THE HAGUE—(U.P.)—The Netherlands today rejected Britain's recent bid for cooperation of neutrals against Germany.

Closing a foreign affairs debate in parliament after speakers had opposed the plea for "united action" sounded Saturday by Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, Foreign Minister Eelco N. Van Kleffens said the Netherlands was under no obligation to depart from her policy of strict neutrality.

Van Kleffens did not mention Churchill, who said that the safety of small European neutrals depended upon "united action" with the allies.

Churchill's speech of last Saturday was attacked by representatives of all parties in yesterday's foreign affairs debate.

'WAVE' SPREADS

Perrysville Farm Home Looted of Cash, Jewelry.

PERRYSVILLE — The crime wave that has held sway in nearby Loudonville for the past 11 days, spread to this vicinity last night when thieves ransacked the home of Ross C. Byers, near here on route 39.

Entry was made by removing a piece of tin from the kitchen door and opening the lock, according to Deputy Sheriffs M. F. Rickenbrod and Walter Lasley of Ashland county, who investigated.

Rickenbrod said $7.25 in cash, silverware, one gold watch and a gold bracelet were taken but could not estimate the total loss.

The house was broken into between 8 and 9:30 p. m. while Mr. anud Mrs. Byers and their two children were in Loudonville. Rickenbrod said the thieves ransacked the entire house. A number of fingerprints were secured by the officers.

Answers Charge WPA to Blame for Frozen Fire Plugs

Aroused over charges that the WPA was partly responsible for the frozen fire hydrants here during the sub-zero weather last week, James L. Kelley, district WPA director, said he didn't want his workers "to be the cause or even the excuse for the ineffectiveness of the fire fighting system."

In letters to all WPA supervisors in the county, Kelley ordered them to obtain permission of the fire department before opening any hydrants and then insist upon an inspection of the hydrant when the job is finished.

Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger had charged Monday that the WPA and city building contractors were responsible for the unusual number of fire hydrants found frozen last week.

"I do not believe that our work has required the use of fire hydrants in Mansfield for several months, and therefore, even if we had been careless, a reasonable inspection schedule by the fire department officials should have detected that fact long before the current cold spell," Kelley said in his letter, a copy of which went to Mayor William J. Locke.

SHANGHAI—(U.P.)—A Japanese military spokesman said today that extraordinary precautions had been taken to assure the safety of United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson because of an alleged assassination plot.

Johnson is now aboard the United States river gunboat Luzon on the Yangtze river.

Marriott Calls New Grand Jury To Meet Feb. 1 To Hear 14 Cases

With at least 14 cases on the docket, County Prosecutor G. W. Marriott today called the first session of the new grand jury for Thursday, Feb. 1.

The jurors will study, among other cases, charges against James Mayer and Frank Grigsby, Mansfield reformatory inmates who escaped several weeks ago in a car stolen in Mansfield. Captured a short time later in Dayton, they are held in the county jail on charges of auto theft.

Other cases on the docket involve John Ickes, accused of forgery; Ed Hughes, charged with cutting with intent to wound; Bernard Milligan, auto theft, and William Glick, non-support.

Marriott said he would submit a number of cases to the jury for secret indictments, most of them involving non-support charges.

The new January term grand jurors are:

George H. Tobias, 326 Park avenue west; Jennie Bragg, Wayne street; Mrs. Cleo Teeter, 141 Hammond avenue; Clarence E. Herrick, 128 Hedges street; Clyde Berry, Monroe township; L. A. The boy who allegedly did the shooting told police he fired at the river.

Symphony Wins Acclaim With Mastery of Beethoven Music

By KEN WOODMAN

When better music is found, Beethoven will have written it. And probably no orchestra composed of such young-looking musicians as the National Symphony which members of the Mansfield Civic Music association heard last night at Mansfield High school auditorium, will ever do a more convincing job of reading Beethoven's familiar Symphony No. 5 in C minor than was done here

The opening composition from the opening bars, often described as fate knocking at the door, the Beethoven Fifth formed the second half of the two-fold pro-gram which Dr. Hans Kindler conducted for an enthusiastic audience of more than 1,000.

Rightly perhaps, Dr. Kindler declined to play an encore despite the insistent ovation he and the orchestra received after reading the Beethoven work.

At the conclusion of the first half of the concert, however, he gave three encores. Tschaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" from the Nutcracker Suite the Russian Chant of Moussorgsky and the Prelude to act three of Richard Wagner's Lohengrin.

To the often-played Tschaikowsky number, Dr. Kindler brought

BORAH STAKED HOPE OF FAME ON COURT FIGHT

Wrote Report Against Packing for Generations of Future.

(Editor's note—In his unselfish "behind-the-scenes" direction of the historic supreme court fight, the late Senator Borah sought only one small part for himself. How that too, had to be sacrificed in the moment of final victory is disclosed in another article in a series by Borah's closest newspaper friend, William K. Hutchinson.)

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
(Copyright, 1940)

WASHINGTON — (NS) — William Edgar Borah scrawled his isg nature on a typewritten document in the summer of 1937 and believed that single act would win him immortality among Americans.

It marked his participation in writing the majority report of the senate judiciary committee, condemning President Roosevelt's Supreme court bill as "un-American," dictatorial and a menace to democratic institutions. So he told me.

Borah was proud, with a patriotic pride, of the U. S. Supreme court and a democratic institution. Preservation of the American form of government, he believed with fierce ardor, depended upon preservation of an independent court—now and forever.

So the greatest pride of his life lay not in orations that stirred his country, not in legislative victories that floored presidents, but in erecting a landmark for all time that might be used to preserve the integrity of the Supreme court and thereby American democracy itself.

Borah attached great historical importance to the report, because he knew how the writings of American heroes were searched almost in vain for arguments against arbitrary enlargement of the court.

The opposition found a few words by Washington, a sentence or two by Jefferson, an implication by Lincoln, to support their stand. Of all American greats, they could summon only Woodrow Wilson out of the dead past to condemn "packing of the court." And they gave that Wilsonian epic to none other than Senator Carter Glass, the "unreconstructed rebel" of Virginia, to use in his denunciation of the president's bill.

On May 18, 1937, the committee rejected the president's bill. Opposition members of the committee met immediately, elected Senator William H. King (D) of Utah, their chairman and turned to talk of writing the report. King suggested Borah, who declined at once under his strategical rule that Democrats should lead the fight until the bill was actually defeated in the senate.

Borah related to me that he told his judiciary colleagues:

"There are two men here at this table, Democrats, who have won the right by their courage and statesmanship to write this report. I mean Pat McCarran and Joe O'Mahoney. (McCarran, of Nevada; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.)

"They are both close friends of the president. They have stood up for their convictions against a withering fire of pressure that would have defeated men of lesser stature.

"The country owes to every Democrat in this senate, who fought this bill, a debt of gratitude. They are patriots in every sense of the word but to these two men, McCarran and O'Mahoney, the country owes a debt it can never repay. I move they be named with the chairman (King) to serve as a subcommittee in drafting our report to the senate."

The trio was elected at once. But later they asked Borah to write a section, dealing with the history and independence of the court. As they worked on various drafts, word reached them that the President had abandoned his original bill and authorized his senate leader, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas to draft a compromise.

There was talk of holding up the adverse report on the original bill to see what the new bill would look like. Borah intervened. He told his colleagues:

"Write the report anyway. We are not writing it for the senate. We are not writing it for our fellow citizens. We are writing it for posterity. We must write a report to which senators and representatives in congress one hundred years from now may turn for guidance if any other president ever proposes to impose his personal or political control on the Supreme court and make our federal courts subservient either to his will or to that of congress."

The report was filed in the senate June 14.

When senate debate opened July 6 the opposition asked Borah to make their opening address. He declined in favor of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Montana) but told the Montanan:

"There is one speech I want to make. The Supreme court has the greatest record for the defense of human liberty of any institution created by the hand of man. You can't find it equaled in the history of the world. Read it and you will never find a case in which it has refused to use the influence of the Bill of Rights to protect the liberty of the individual, no matter what odds lay against it, even though the whole nation was against it.

Died With Him.

"This supreme court has protected those rights against every political encroachment and inroad by the congress or the executive for 100 years. I want to make a speech on that phase of the issue."

Wheeler agreed to Borah's request. On July 22, the senate recommended the president's bill to its judiciary committee death by a vote of 70 to 20.

That afternoon I noted Senator M. M. Logan (D.) of Kentucky had placed an undelivered speech, in behalf of the court bill, in the Congressional Record. I asked Borah whether he would put his undelivered speech in the Record too.

"It isn't in writing," Borah replied. Then he put his hand over his heart. "I have mine in here." And there it died with him.

(Tomorrow — Borah's "surprise" 1940 choice for president.)

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor

CITY Class A league cagers, who will be opposed by Bliss college of Columbus and the North Electrics of Galion, expect to collect a number of "fins" for the Finns tonight when they stage their Finnish Relief Fund games at Mansfield high school.

The college team meets the Blue Goose Sohioans and the Galionites face the Westinghouse Electrics, and both of the visiting quintets are undefeated.

These two games should give Mansfield cage-goers a nice evening's entertainment.

Lots of luck to the Friendly House boxing team which goes into action in the Cleveland Golden Gloves tonight. . . . You'll like that story about Germany Schaeffer, the diamond sport's first comedian, in this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

In 34 performances in five cities, Sonja Henie's ice revue drew 427,000 spectators and the receipts amounted to $617,000. . . . It really looks like the pros for Jock Sutherland.

Marius Russo, New York Yankee pitcher, starred in the cage sport for Clair Bee at Long Island U. . . . See where Kenny Keltner has signed his 1940 contract. Apparently, he has no intentions to fight for unemployment compensation.

UNCROWNED CHAMPION—The Rice Lake, Wis., bowler who knocked down nine pins on his first ball, along with the upper half of the No. 5 pin and had to shoot again to get the rest of the pin for his spare.

Night Baseball's O. K. With Mack Now.

CONNIE MACK wants the summer of night baseball games increased from seven to 17. Of course, the reason is simple. His daytime games averaged 2,000, while the night tilts last season turned in nearly capacity crowds, once reaching the 30,000 mark. Once he laughed when night ball was mentioned. . . . The first home run Johnny Mize of the Cards hits in 1940 will be No. 100 of his career.

Iowa's coaching staff represents the entire span of Knute Rockne's coaching career. Head Coach Eddie Anderson was the first substitute ever put into a game in 1918 and Line Coach Jim Harris was the last substitute sent into his last game in 1930. . . . Harry Smith, U.S.C. guard, was the only player chosen on every major All-America eleven.

FROM CHICAGO—"Withdrawal of the University of Chicago from intercollegiate football is regretted by the vast majority of its supporters, but most of all by columnists whose responsibilities include the forecasting of college scores." . . . Chicago in the last few years was one of the few teams whose defeat one could predict with almost rockbound certainty. Wonder if anybody missed picking Chicago in the Oberlin game.

Seeks Golden Gloves

Army of 200, Including Seven Mansfielders, Swing Fists In Cleveland Tonight.

NORTHERN OHIO'S annual leather storm will start in three rings in Cleveland Public auditorium tonight.

The event is the first night of the annual Cleveland Golden Gloves fights, and in the neighborhood of 200 ambitious amateurs will be in there slugging for fame, a pair of golden gloves and possibly trips to Chicago and Boston for the tournament of champions and the national AAU senior championships.

The lucky travelers will be the winners in the eight classes of the open division, which is composed of boys who have gone somewhere in the golves fights before. Winners in the novice class, open to fighters who never have achieved fame in the gloves battles, get the symbolic gloves, the satisfaction of being champions and the knowledge that they will have to fight in the open division next year.

Preliminary bouts will be tonight, with second round and quarter finals Friday, when three rings also will be used. A week from tonight two rings will hold the fighters in semi-finals, and a week from Saturday will see the finals in one ring.

Mansfield boys entered in the elimination are Jake Zacharias, Paul Carbetta, Beauford Glover, Al Sauer and John Emerson. Ernie and Mel McKinley of Mansfield will represent an Ashland stable.

Only two open division champions are returning to the wars this year. They are Max Schindler of Lorain, feather champ, and Tony Algeri of Cleveland, bantam winner. Schindler last year won the plaudits of the crowd by coming from behind to kayo Bobby Root in the finals.

The lack of returning open champions, however, is more than compensated by the novice champs of last year who are trying their gloves in the tougher class. No less than six of last year's eight winners will be back. Among them being Mel McKinley.

A favorite in the heavyweight ranks is Allen Aubery, last year's champion. Other 1939 novice winners entering the open division are Bob Richardson, lightweight; Harry Cohen, welter, and Edmund Robinson, middleweight.

Boo!

Meet Mr. D'Angel (that is correct) who is in the United States to throw fear into the hearts of American wrestlers. Even if he couldn't grapple—and he's won 82 of his last 84 matches in Europe—this 250-pound nightmare shouldn't have much trouble getting his opposition under control.

Baptist Quint 'Giant Killer'

Hand Mayflower Courtmen First Setback.

Mayflower basketeers saw their six-game winning streak snapped last night when a determined Park Avenue Baptist combine handed them a 28 to 22 defeat in the Church Class A league on the Y court.

The heretofore unbeaten Mayflower quintet, after picking up a 6-5 lead in the opening stanza, saw that advantage vanish in the second quarter and was never able to regain the lead.

While Mayflower was knocked out of the unbeaten list, First Lutheran dropped a 29 to 14 decision to First Methodist and St. John's Evangelical smothered Central Methodist, 42 to 21.

The Baptist, with Rayburn leading the way, limited Mayflower, to two points in the second frame and at the intermission was sporting a 11 to 8 advantage. Baptist led, 20 to 16, going into the last quarter. Rayburn scored 13 points, while Russell tallied 19 for the losers.

First Methodist and St. John's hopped into the lead in the first periods. The Methodists were ahead, 14 to 8 at the half, and St. John's was leading, 21 to 10.

LEW JENKINS KNOCKS OUT FOE WITH TWO PUNCHES

DALLAS—(AP)—Lew Jenkins, hero of Sweetwater, Tex., who is a leading contender for Lou Ambers' world lightweight title, scored one of the quickest knockouts on record last night to avenge a loss he suffered a year ago to Chino Alvarez of Cuba.

Two punches—one to the body and one to the head—put Chino on the canvas at the three second mark in the first round of their scheduled 10-rounder, and Chino didn't wake up until his seconds showered him with a bucket of ice water.

THREE MANSFIELD TEAMS IN WOMEN'S TOURNEY

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio's 1940 women's state bowling tournament, opening here Feb. 9, will have a record entry of 274 teams, Abbie Aston of Akron, secretary of the Ohio Women's Bowling association, announced today.

Entries by cities includes: Columbus 117, Toledo 39, Cleveland 28, Akron 16, Cincinnati 15, Dayton 12, Sandusky 3, Elyria 5, Tiffin 5, Lorain 2, Middletown 4, Mansfield 3, Newark 2, Marion 2, Mt. Vernon 3, Canton 4, Cambridge 3, and Steubenville, Norwalk, Fostoria, Lima, Waukeonela, Fremont, Barnesville, Salem and Youngstown, one each.

Broaca Indians' First Holdout

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Johnny Broaca, who received $2,000 each for his four victories last season, today became the Indians' first announced holdout.

The right-handed pitcher returned his 1940 contract unsigned to the Cleveland club because it called for a $2,000 slash.

"I have a lot of pitching left in me," Broaca said in Boston where he is conditioning himself. "The Cleveland club realizes that. If it didn't, it would have sent me a contract calling for $6,000. If I am worth that to them, I am worth the $8,000 I got last season."

The bespectacled flinger, who quit the New York Yankees in the middle of the 1937 season with a $6,000 world series cut just ahead, lost two games last summer while winning the four.

'Sneeze' Achiu In Top Match

Slated to Meet Stratton at Armory Monday.

Walter "Sneeze" Achiu, clever Chinese-Hawaiian light heavyweight from Honolulu, and Walter Stratton, muscular farmer boy from Leetonia, have been signed to meet in the feature event of Monday night's mat card in the Armory ring.

Matchmaker Tim Nolan of the Quality club has signed these two sensational little fellows to wrestle for two best out of three falls with an hour and a half time limit.

Both of these boys have been giving a fine account of themselves on the Mansfield wrestling pad in the past few weeks. Stratton has defeated some of the leading matmen of his weight in the Armory.

Achiu hasn't appeared here so often but the few glimpses Mansfield fans have had of the spectacular little Chinese star have convinced them of his mat class.

Stratton will carry a very definite edge in strength since he is one of the strongest men in the world. The little farmer holds several weight lifting records that have not been equalled since he left active competition four years ago when he became actively interested in wrestling.

Invents New Type Basketball Game

ATHENS — (AP) — Basketball games played by "fifths" instead of quarters have been introduced to cage fans at Ohio university. The new type game which requires complete replacement of players at the start of each period was developed by Harold Wise, assistant Ohio U. coach, to furnish competition for the freshman court squad.

The regulation 40-minute span of a college basketball game is divided into five 8-minute periods under Wise's innovation. There are only short intermissions between quarters. The over-all time of a game is less than the over-all time of the regular collegiate game of two 20-minute periods and a lengthy halftime intermission.

Players cannot appear in the game during two consecutive periods, thereby opening up competition opportunities for at least 10 players a game, Wise said. The added man-power serves to speed up the game because of few time-outs for physical weariness.

Billiards Aid Farm Hoopsters

Raemelton Team Cinches Share of Title as Rex Club Whips Canfields.

RAEMELTON FARM hoopsters today are assured of at least a share of the first round championship of the Friendly House Senior Class A basketball league.

With only two more contests remaining on the opening round schedule, the Farm quintet clinched a share of the title by stopping the Isaly Dairy five, 36 to 32, at the settlement last night.

The victory, coupled with the Rex Billiards' timely 36 to 24 win over the Augustine Canfields gives the Raemelton combine a two-game lead.

Harold LeMunyon's free throw in the final 15 seconds gave the Moose Lodge club a thrilling 31 to 30 triumph over the Daley Cafe team in the other setto last night.

Paced by Matt Hager, former Ontario high star, the Raemelton outfit held the lead all the way, but encountered trouble in stopping the desperate Dairymen in the fourth frame. Hager tallied 10 points for the winners.

Raemelton led, 8-3, in the first period, 18-12 at the half, and 27-22 at the end of the third quarter. Shaffer was high-point man with 14 markers.

The Cuemen's win enabled them to crawl into a tie with the Canfields for the runner-up post. With Mike Wentz collecting 11 points the Billiards hopped into the lead in the initial period and never lost it. The winners were ahead, 20 to 9 at halftime.

Trailing by a 19 to 15 count at the half, the Moose Lodge staged a rally in the third and fourth periods to topple the Daley quint. The winners tied the score at 26-all as play opened in the last frame.

Horning was high for the winners with 11 points, while Bajia paced the Daley team with a like number.

'Not Far Away,' Says DiMaggio

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—Joe DiMaggio, the New York Yankee centerfielder who was the major leagues most unsuccessful holdout two seasons ago, looked over his 1940 contract today and said: "I don't anticipate any trouble at all this year."

He refused to divulge what the Yankee management offered him but said the figure was "not far away" from what he had expected. In 1938 DiMaggio held out for $40,000 until the playing season was nearly a month old. Then he settled for $25,000. Last season he topped American league batters with a .381 average, was voted the "most valuable player" award and drew down $27,500.

WHITE SOX TURN THUMBS DOWN ON BENNY M'COY

CHICAGO — (AP) — Chicago's White Sox have quit the major league's scrambled bidding for Infielder Benny McCoy. Vice president Harry Grabiner said today, "Manager Jimmy Dykes doesn't think McCoy is worth anywhere near what he is asking."

Stage Finnish Fund Cage Show Tonight

City League Teams Meet Bliss College, Galion Quints on High School Court.

TWO BASKETBALL GAMES promising more than an ordinary amount of action is on the docket for Mansfield cage-goers on the Tygers' court tonight.

Tonight's Mansfield high hardwood card will pit the Blue Goose Sohioans against Bliss college of Columbus at 8:30 and the Westinghouse Electrics against North Electrics of Galion in the opener at 7:30.

The games are the City Class A league's contribution to the city's Finnish Relief Fund program, and all of proceeds above expenses will be turned over to The News-Journal, which is sponsoring the collection of funds for the national committee headed by Herbert Hoover. Admission to tonight's games will be 25 cents.

The first game between the Westies and Galionites should be packed with action. The North Electrics defeated the Mansfield quintet, 32 to 23, earlier this season on the Galion court and the Westies will attempt to make amends tonight.

That the Bliss college quintet is classy need not be stressed. It has appeared in the city on other occasions and it has yet to lose to a Mansfield team.

The Blue Goose entry has been strengthened by the addition of Al Stickler and Johnny Rees of the Yuncker Sports, and the height that they will give the Sohioans should aid materially.

* * *

Blue Goose has another good-sized man in Tom Farrell, who will hold down the center post tonight. The rest of the Blue Goose lineup is indefinite.

Cleveland Bids For Benny McCoy

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— The Cleveland Indians would like to land the baseball services of Benny McCoy, Detroit free agent, but the Tribe is not likely to go as high as the $35,000 offer plus $10,000 which the 21-year-old infielder said was made by the Philadelphia Athletics.

McCoy, at his home in Grandville, Mich., said he had received two telegrams from C. C. Slapnicka, vice-president and general manager of the Cleveland club. Slapnicka made no definite offer but merely "sounded me out," McCoy said.

Red Birds Top Madison Club Second Time

Ashland County Team Hands Rams 46-32 Setback At Loudonville.

Three times the Madison high Rams have tackled opponents outside the Richland county league and all they have to show for it is three defeats.

Coach Al Fendrich's cagers, in second place in the county circuit race, invaded Loudonville high to clash with the Red Birds last night and came off the Loudonville high gymnasium on the short end of a 46 to 32 score.

It was Loudonville's second win over Madison this season. Ashland scored the other victory over the Rams early this season.

Mentor John Kerkeres' athletes went on a scoring spree at the opening gun and never trailed. The Red Birds led, 14 to 7, in the initial quarter, 31 to 13, at the halftime, and 35 to 25, at the end of the third frame.

Madison, led by Doug DeNero, outscored the winners, 12-4, in the third chapter, but lacked the power to threaten the Red Birds' commanding advantage.

DeNero was the offensive star of the evening with 11 tallies, while Mutchler, substitute center, led Loudonville with 10 points.

The Loudonville reserves defeated the Madison seconds, 24 to 14, in the preliminary contest.

Ashland Club Shoots 1426

Shooting a remarkable 1426 series, the Ashland Rifle club defeated the Richland Gasco club in a firing match on the Ashland range last night. The Mansfield team hung up 1378 points.

Carl Coleman led the Ashland shooters with a 293 aggregate, which featured a 100 perfect prone score. He missed once kneeling and scored 94 standing. Every Ashland shooter was above 280. Ferguson, Church and Frey shot 281's for the losers.

GALENTO, BAER SLATED TO FIGHT IN PHILLY

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Two-ton Tony Galento will fight Max Baer at Philadelphia's Convention hall during the first week of April, probably on a Finnish relief fund basis, Manager Joe Jacobs asserted today.

Furthermore, if Tony gets by Max, the East Orange barkeep and Joe Louis will tangle at this city's Municipal stadium in a title match next June, Jacobs said.

Know Your Basketball

—News-Journal Photo.

Here is a common foul in basketball. It is called "hacking." The right arm of Joe Keiffer, Mansfield high cager, has come in contact with the outstretched arm of Russ Beer, another Tyger, in his attempt to gain possession of the ball. This foul is committed with Beer in a "pivot," but it is also called frequently when a player is in the act of shooting. This photo is one in The News-Journal series explaining various basketball fouls.

PITTSBURGH APPEARS HEADED FOR BIG TEN

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—The reported booking of the University of Michigan on Pitt's football schedule this fall would make the Panthers eligible for admission to the Western conference.

The Sun-Telegraph said the game was "on," but officials at Pitt declined comment. Michigan authorities reported the Panthers were being considered for an open date Nov. 3, and that a decision might be made by this week-end. Michigan would be Pitt's fifth Big Ten opponent—five games with conference members being required yearly under conference rules. Pitt has also booked Ohio State, Purdue, Minnesota and Indiana.

'BISCUIT READY'

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit pointed at Santa Anita park today for his first race since he went lame last February, the $2,000 six-furlong Glendora for four-year-olds and up. Seabiscuit was to have run yesterday. Rain forced postponement of the event.

Plans Lineup Change

Hoffman Toys With Idea of Moving Shiplet to Guard For Bellevue Game.

SHOWING dissatisfaction with the way the Tygers have performed in recent games, Coach Vern Hoffman today toyed with the idea of a lineup switch for Friday night's game at Bellevue.

Lacking the material for a complete shake-up, Hoffman is seriously planning a change which he believes might correct some of the faults that have cropped out in the attack.

It was the Tygers' failure to hold possession of the ball long enough on a number of occasions to even get one crack at the basket that cost them a defeat at the hands of New Philadelphia last week.

* * *

Hoffman indicated today that he may experiment with a switch of Sophomore Jack Shiplet from a forward to a guard post. Shiplet has proven himself a capable ball player.

The experiment if attempted will move one of the present guards to forward.

Hoffman is particularly anxious to have his Tygers in tip-top form for Friday's game as he sends his new charges against the school at which he coached for nine years.

The Mansfield mentor admits that Bellevue is considerable tougher than last season, and realizes that the Tygers have litle chance to win until they show a complete reversal of form.

Playing on its own floor, Bellevue is heavily-favored to take the Tygers into camp, according to reports from the northwestern Ohio city.

Bellville Nears County Title.

NEEDING to win only two of their remaining five games to cinch a tie for the Richland county league title, Bellville's Bluejays are in a splendid position to cop honors this year.

After their game at Lucas Friday night, the Bluejays play only one of their other four games on the road. The Lucas game will be followed by tilts with Butler, Madison, Lexington and Ontario. The Lexington game is the only tilt to be played on the road after Friday's invasion of Lucas.

* * *

Lexington plays at Ontario and Union performs at Butler in the other games Friday. Madison is not scheduled.

Armstrong Wins, Accomplishes First of Three-Point Program

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—The three-point landing welterweight champion Henry Armstrong mapped for 1940 was one-third accomplished today—Pedro Montanez down; Al Davis and Cefarino Garcia coming up.

It took only nine of the allotted 15 rounds last night for the hammer to pound his plucky Puerto Rican foe into a bloody, helpless figure.

Weighing 139¾, four and three-quarters pounds less than Montanez, but the heaviest in his career, the Los Angeles colored boy looked capable of crushing anyone who could come under the welterweight limit and give a mighty accounting as a middleweight, as well.

That, of course, is exactly what he hopes to do—one more defense of his championship, preferably against Davis, and then abdication for a grab at Garcia's middleweight title, recognized in New York and California.

The gory grind was 47 seconds into the ninth round last night when Referee Billy Cavanaugh finally stopped it and awarded a technical knockout to the champion. The challenger was down three times before that and was twice saved by the bell.

Montanez entered the ring with a well-planned campaign—to stand head to head with Armstrong so that flailing windmill would never have a chance to catch him full force.

For two rounds the strategy worked and they fought furiously shoulder to shoulder, never moving a foot in either direction for a minute or more at a time. Then in the third Armstrong caught Montanez in the center of the ring, cut a crimson gash over his right eye with a full left, and the outcome was inevitable.

After downed for counts of five and seven in the fourth Montanez tried valiantly to come back and succeeded in shading his opponent in the sixth round. But in the seventh Armstrong opened another cut, this time under his left eye, and just as the bell rang in the eighth he fell to the floor again. It might as well have ended there.

A capacity crowd of 19,157 jammed Madison Square Garden for the show, contributing a gate of $59,575.

BIG SAVINGS

City Ignores Fraction of Cent, Saves $2.983.

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—The city of Houston ignored six-tenths of a cent on a contract and saved $2.983.

A contract was awarded a nursery company for landscaping the new city hall.

The second low bidder protested the company had failed to fulfill the requirement of posting 10 per cent of the bid, because its check was short six-tenths of a cent of the exact amount.

If the city had thrown out the first award because of this technical error, it would have lost $2.983, the difference between the bids.

SALES ON SPURT

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (INS)—Department store sales in Memphis were far ahead of all years since 1930, retail store executives had revealed today. One of the largest department stores in the city reported its sales had run ahead of those for the same period in 1929.

CHAPTER VII

"And also the value of propaganda," Roland suggested. "We used to amuse ourselves during the Spanish affair by listening to the radio, turning on first one side and then the other. Until the last week or two it was impossible to figure out who was winning. Both sides claimed sweeping victories in exactly the same localities. Poor Julie almost went mad trying to keep the pins on our war map straight."

Claire looked up to see Noel Yorke's eyes on her, and she fearlessly looked deep into his. But there wasn't the slightest answering flicker of recognition.

Whoever he really was, whatever his mission, he apparently had no intention of revealing anything here. She had felt her heart leap suddenly in her breast when his casual guestion had brought the information from Rene Martin that he was the aviator who had been assigned to fly Cameron to Le Havre to catch the St. Croiz, but she had noted, too, how quickly he dropped the subject and asked nothing further.

She determined to ask Captain Martin about it if she ever had a chance to speak with him alone. Perhaps he had had some word which he didn't care to reveal at a general gathering like this. If he did, he might tell her about it when he learned who she was, her relationship to the missing Cameron. She'd try to make the opportunity, later on, to talk with him alone.

The opportunity did come soon after, when the Rolands suddenly decided it was time for them to go home, and the party broke up.

"If you're walking, I'll trot along with you," Yorke said. "I feel the need of some outdoor exercise. I've been cooped up at home most of the day, working."

"Who are you painting, now?" Maria asked. "I'd think that wartime would be pretty poor time for portrait work unless you get a lot of officers for clients."

"Finishing up on old Mrs. Van Harpen," Yorke answered. "She left for New York two months ago, and I'd forgotten all about her until I got a cable yesterday demanding to know when I was going to send her her portrait. "I'd put it aside, having marked it down as a dead loss."

He shook hands with Claire and Danny and called a cheery good night as he followed the Rolands down the stairs. Claire and Danny, with Captain Martin, followed a few minutes later.

"We'll have to walk over to the Champs Elysees to get a cab," Danny said, "and I doubt if we can find one even there at this hour."

"Fine," the officer said. "That's my direction, too, and I'll go with you at least as far as the boulevard. I feel like a walk after my tiring day of sitting around waiting for a man who never appeared."

"Did you have any word at all from Mr. Cameron?" Claire asked, and then added, hastily, "Don't think I'm asking out of idle curiosity. You see, I'm Mr. Cameron's secretary—I was to have sailed on the boat with him, but when he didn't show up I came back to Paris. I must find out what has happened to him."

"I'm sorry," Martin answered. "I can't tell you a thing about him." They walked along another half block in silence, and then the officer suddenly stopped. "Guess I'll turn off here," he said. "It's a bit shorter to my flat if I go down this street."

After they had said good nights, and Claire and Danny were headed again toward the boulevard, it suddenly dawned on the girl that Captain Martin had evaded her question. He hadn't said he didn't know what had happened to Cameron. He simply said he couldn't tell her a thing about him.

Did that mean something had happened to Bill Cameron? That Martin knew what had happened and didn't want her to know? She shivered and drew her wrap more closely about her as she tightened her hold on Danny's arm.

Ater Danny had left Claire at her hotel and she was in her room, she took from her compact the card "Z. Y" had placed there, lighted a match and burned it in a metal ash tray. It was conceivable that such a card might get her into trouble if it were found in her purse—it might lead to awkard questions which she would be unable to answer.

When she had seen Noel Yorke at Maria's, she was certain he was the man who had shared her taxi, and yet all the time he was there, he gave not the slightest hint that he was other than he pretended to be—a dilettante who dabbled with painting.

He certainly didn't seem to the girl to be a person who would be in the espionage service—counter-espionage, she supposed it was—and yet she reminded herself she couldn't judge always from appearances. Bill Cameron, for instance, was not suspected even by his associates in Washington of being other than what he pretended to be—a sort of a glorified messenger boy. Yet she knew how important he was in the government service—how much he was relied upon.

These thoughts kept her awake until nearly daylight, and it was nearly noon before she awakened. She phoned the desk, but there were no messages for her and there had been no telephone calls. During the afternoon, she got Sanford on the wire but aside from learning that he was making every effort to find some trace of Cameron, nothing had happened. He had no news to give her. He hadn't heard from Bornet.

Danny had no news about Cameron either, and after a lonely dinner in her room, she decided to call at the Surete offices herself. Anything was better than this eternal waiting. She might be lucky enough to find Bornet in his office, and learn something from him.

She glanced about as she stepped from the hotel doorway into the cab at the curb, half expecting "Z. Y." to pop out of the shadows again and join her, but no one was there and she was alone in the cab.

The ancient vehicle, creaking in every joint, moved slowly along in the darkness and Claire was deep in her own thoughts when the cab stopped so suddenly she was thrown forward from her seat. The driver had the door open in a moment, and was shouting at her.

"Air raid, Mademoiselle! Air raid! The alarm is sounding! Come quickly!"

Claire heard the unearthly wail of the sirens then, and tumbled out onto the sidewalk. The sound, she knew, was coming from clusters of loud speaker horns placed at every street intersection all over Paris. The driver grasped her hand and started to run, the girl stumbling after him.

A dim blue light gleamed ahead, and the driver plunged down the steps of a subway station, Claire following as fast as she could in her high-heeled slippers.

The white tiles of the Metro station walls gleamed cerily in the soft blue light, and as they ran down the platform the girl was aware of hundreds of others who had preceded them to this point of refuge. They were huddled at the far end of the station, as far away as possible from the steps which led to the street, and Claire thought it might have been much more sensible if they were separated instead of in one compact mass. If a falling bomb should happen to hit above them and pierce the ground and the concrete over their heads, every one probably would be killed instantly.

She heard a voice shouting, and in the dim light made out a gendarme, his bright steel helmet glistening, trying to spread out the milling crowd.

"Monsieurs! Madames!" he shouted. "Please do not gather in one crowd. Spread out! It is safer that way if a bomb should fall!"

Gradually he was able to bring some order from the chaos and before long Claire could feel the tension of the crowd relax. People began chattering with their neighbors. Short staccato sentences at first, then as time went on and nothing happened, an even hum of conversation filled the station.

An hour later when the officer shouted that the "all clear" signal had been given, the crowd moved quietly out of the station up to the street and went about its business.

Her driver had stayed close at hand, and she soon was in the cab again, headed for the Surete Generale. Bornet was not there, and no information could be given about his whereabouts, she was told, so she returned to her taxi and gave the driver Maria's address. Perhaps "Z. Y." might be there. Even talking with Maria would be better than being so alone. But again she was destined to disappointment. Her ring was unanswered.

Back at her hotel, there were notations that both Danny and Rene Martin had phoned, but neither had left a mesage. She spent a fruitless half hour trying to get them on the phone, and then went to bed utterly discouraged with her efforts to find any trace of Bill Cameron two days after he had dropped so suddenly from sight. To cling to she had only the assurance "Z. Y." had given her that Cameron was still alive and well. That was all that kept her from hysterics, she was certain.

Maria phoned her the next afternoon and asked if she had made a decision yet about moving into her flat with her. Claire said she had been too busy to think about it, but when the Russian girl urged her, she promised to drop by that night.

Claire spent the afternoon walking about the downtown streets, and wound up at the embassy. Welles Sanford still was without information, he said, but added that the Ministry of War was alarmed now about Cameron's whereabouts and had sent word through all their agents to be on the lookout for the American. They should turn up something soon, now. He had heard nothing more from Bornet, either.

As she was leaving, she ran into Danny who had been closeted with the ambassador, and eagerly accepted his invitation to dinner.

"I've been alone too much the last few days," she told him. "You've saved the life of a lonely woman, Danny."

"Sorry I can't take you some place later," he said, "but I've got to go back to the office after dinner and work until daylight. I've found a way to get some yarns past the censor through a man who's leaving in the morning, and I'll be busy at the typewriter all night."

"I've a date, anyway," Claire told him, and explained about her promise to call on Maria.

Danny dropped her there after dinner, and she found Maria sketching and refused to let her interrupt her work.

"I'll just sit here and watch," Claire said, "until you get through."

"It's a rush order. I must have the drawings ready the first thing in the morning. Have you thought any more about my proposition—moving in with me? You'll find it a lot cheaper than the hotel, and I hope, much more congenial. Your share of the rent will be only about $30, which includes the light and gas, too. Five more will pay for the woman I have come in to do the cleaning and cooking. What do you say?"

Claire answered that it surely sounded like a bargain, but was spared making a definite commitment by the arrival at that moment of Noel Yorke with a friend of his from England. He introduced the stranger as Wyndham Trevor, and explained that he was in Paris on business.

Maria put aside her work, and the four of them talked on general subjects for about half an hour. Noel suddenly glanced at his wrist watch and announced that he had to leave.

"I'll run along with you then," Trevor said and arose.

"I'm still trying to persuade Claire to move in with me," Maria told Noel, laughingly. "She hasn't answered yet whether she'll come or not." She turned to Clarie. "Why not stay here tonight instead of going all the way back to that stuffy hotel? I can lend you some things for tonight, and if you like your room, you can move in tomorrow. What do you say?"

"I think it's a fine idea," Noel spoke up before Claire could answer. She glanced at him and saw his eyes looking intently into hers. She was certain she read a warning in them, and when she turned back to Maria a ready excuse came to her lips.

"I'm expecting an important message sometime during the night—a message which will determine whether I stay in Paris or go home," she said, glibly. "I'll let you know tomorrow morning, Maria, what I'm going to do. Please don't think me ungrateful, but I really must be at the hotel tonight."

Noel helped Claire on with her coat in the hallway and walked down the steps to the street with her and his friend.

At the curb, Noel asked Trevor if he would mind seeing Claire home—his errand took him in the opposite direction and, scarcely waiting for an answer, he vanished in the darkness.

In the cab going toward the hotel, Claire thrust her hands in the side pockets of her coat, and almost exclaimed aloud. Her right hand had come in contact with a card which she knew hadn't been there when she went to Maria's flat. Then in a moment she understood. It was a message to her from Noel, "Z. Y." had acted again.

SENT TO O. S. R.

Boy, 16, Admits Breaking Into Home, Stealing Watch.

An attempt to sell a stolen watch to a downtown jeweler landed a 16-year-old colored youth in Ohio State reformatory today.

Pleading guilty before Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court yesterday to a charge of breaking and entering, Earl Smith was sentenced to one year to age in the reformatory.

He was accused of entering the home of Motz Schultz, 76 West Fifth street, two weeks ago and taking a watch valued at $20.

Police said they apprehended him when a jeweler, who had been given a description of the watch, called them when the youth brought it to his establishment.

Officers said the boy was released from the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster last January after serving a term for cutting another youth during an argument in New London.

One candidate at least looms up on the political horizon as Senator Vandenburg is hailed by Nye as Republican choice. Seems that Vandenburg's promise to serve only one term if elected has put him on good terms with some Republicans.

FILM OF FROST ADDS HAZARDS TO WAR FLYING

Engineers Discover Cause of Many Mystery Accidents.

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

NEW YORK — A phenomenon which has stumped American aeronautical engineers for years is adding to the wartime hazards of air fighting in Finland's bitter winter weather.

Airplanes left unprotected in the open overnight frequently refuse to fly at all, or if pilots do manage to get them aloft, they are often vicious and untractable.

The trouble has been traced to film-thin deposits of frost, ice or snow on the wings which are not readily discernible. For reasons engineers have not been able to explain to their own satisfaction, such deposits interrupt the smooth flow of air over the wing in flight and rob it of its lift.

Mystery accidents, in which airplanes have failed to leave the ground and crashed at the end of airport runways, have been traced to the presence of light frost or snow on the wing.

The difficulties of winter flying, which Finnish and Russian airmen must add to the dangers of anti-aircraft fire and attacks by enemy planes, do not stop at that.

For three hours prior to take-off, engines must be nursed into temperature ranges where they will function. Almost the instant airplanes come to rest after the completion of a mission, oil must be drained from the engines to keep it from congealing. Fire pots enclosed in canvas tents must be put under the motors in exceptionally cold weather to raise the temperature of the metal to 75 degree as a guarantee against power failure on takeoff.

No better description of the work entailed in keeping an airplane functioning in below-zero weather has been supplied than in accounts of the operations of Pacific Alaska Airways in the interior of Alaska.

There not only the motors but the wings are sheathed when the company transports are at rest to prevent accidents. A troublesome but less serious problem encountered aloft by company pilots is the frosting of the cockpit windshield inside during flight. They resort to the use of putty knives or razor blades to scrape off the frost.

The problem of dealing with balky airplanes having frost, ice or snow deposits on the wings became critical about three years ago when several planes on U. S. navy aircraft carriers plunged into the ocean on attempted winter takeoffs. The navy whipped the hazard by handwiping each plane's wings before flights.

NAMED IN SUIT

Dominion Electric Defendant in Trade-Mark Case.

The Dominion Electrical Manufacturing company was named defendant today in a suit filed in federal court in Cleveland which charges trade-mark infringement by the use of the name "Heat-Wave" on its electric heaters.

The action was filed by the Edwin L. Wiegand company of Pittsburgh which asks unspecified damages and an injunction against the use of the name "Heat-Wave" and "any mark deceptively similar to "Heat-Flo," which the Pittsburgh company uses on its products, Associated Press dispatches from Cleveland said.

Ben Shaffer, president of Dominion said the company had been using the name "Heat-Wave" on its heaters for the past year, and had applied for a copyright. Granting of a copyright had been held up, however, as the result of a protest filed by the Pittsburgh firm.

Johnny Appleseed Story Featured In Firm's Advertising

Johnny Appleseed, patron saint of Ohio's first orchards and a hero of early Mansfield history, is being used in an advertising campaign of a nationally known insurance company.

A full page advertisement in this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post, tells the story of Johnny Appleseed (John Chapman) in prose and picture.

The picture depicts the picturesque pioneer, with his hoe and bagful of apple seeds, as he stopped in a clearing to plant the seeds so that there would be fruit for the first pioneers who followed him.

The articles state that Johnny first appeared in the Ohio river valley in 1801, when he was 25 years old, and so assiduously did he work at planting his orchards that in 1838 he had fruit-bearing trees over an area of 100,000 square miles, extending through Ohio and Indiana.

NEW FORD TRACTOR SALES

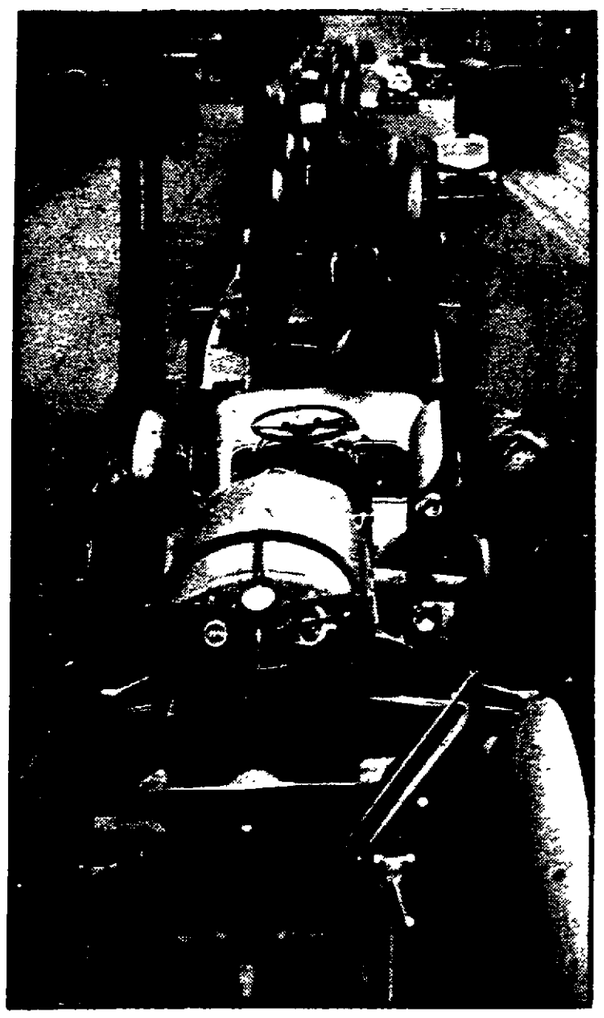
At 86-90 E. Third St.



A prediction that the 3 huge "haulaway" trucks loaded with new Ford tractors now en route to Mansfield from Columbus would be the forerunner of hundreds more was expressed by J. W. Southard of the New Ford Tractor Sales on his return from a meeting of Ferguson-Sherman Manufacturing Corporation dealers in that city on January 16th.

"The meeting was a tremendous success," said Mr. Southard. "It brought home to me more clearly than ever before the revolution in agriculture which the Ford tractor with Ferguson system will make possible."

Columbus gave the dealers a great welcome, Mr. Southard said. A caravan of 36 giant haulaway trucks arrived in the city the morning of the meeting. Believed to be the largest highway shipment of agricultural tractors ever made at one time, it rolled into the city escorted by police. Mayor Floyd Green and E. E. Schatz, president of The Truck-Tractor Equipment Company, distributors, officially welcomed the parade in front of the State House. The welcoming ceremonies marked the completion of a fast run from the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Mich. The caravan was broken at Columbus, the various trucks being dispatched singly and in groups to the towns of the various dealers.

Twenty new Ford tractors will be on display with a complete line of implements in the New Ford Tractor Sales showrooms at 86-90 E. Third, Saturday, Jan. 27th. Mr. Southard is particularly anxious to have local farmers drop in when they are in town, examine the tractor, the new Ferguson implements and the finger-tip-hydraulic control system. "On the farm" demonstrations will be arranged as soon as possible.

The salesmen for the New Ford Tractor Sales will be: Art T. King, who has been selling Ford tractors for 15 years; also Chas. Sipe, who has been selling Ford tractors for the past 8 years.

STOCK MARKET HIT BY MILD PROFIT TAKING

Traders Return to Neutral Territory as Steels and Motors Give Ground.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The stock market encountered mild profit taking today on Wednesday's runup and many issues backed away.

Dealings were quiet throughout. While steels and motors gave ground, along with some others, trends were no worse than moderately mixed.

Bonds were selectively higher and major commodities mostly improved. European securities markets were steady.

Nothing particularly stimulating was discovered in the news and many traders who got in on yesterday's rally returned to neutral territory to await more decisive proof the market might have touched bottom.

Holders of copper shares expressed interest in the summary of the Copper Institute estimating surplus stocks of American refined metal at the end of the past year amounted to 159,485 tons, a decrease of 157,058 from the total reported in last previous survey made in July.

Those watching motors found a degree of comfort in the figures of the Automobile Manufacturers association disclosing retail sales of new passenger cars and trucks in the United States in 1939 aggregated 3,244,537 units, a gain of 38.4 per cent over 1938.

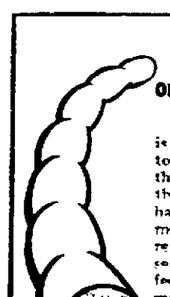
TESTS AT WORLD-FAMOUS HOSPITAL reveal one of greatest discoveries ever made about
CONSTIPATION

16 Scientists Find Way To Actually
Produce Nature's Own Daily, Gentle, Pleasant Bowel Action!

MILLIONS OF SUFFERERS
from indigestion, sick headaches, sallow muddy skin, dull eyes, nervousness, "the blues," that "always tired" feeling resulting from Constipation should benefit by this famous formula.

HERE'S marvelous news for constipation sufferers! Results from 9 months' scientific tests in one of the world's most famous hospitals have at last proved there IS an IDEAL "daily" treatment for constipation. 16 Scientists took part in this clinic. Over 1470 experiments were made.

Tests showed many cathartics, purgatives, laxatives and harsh roughage products only "irritated" the bowel into action and resulted in bigger and more frequent doses having to be taken. After a time some products even made the condition worse.



ONE OF THE CHIEF CAUSES OF CONSTIPATION—
is a "clogged" colon due to lack of moisture in the colon. Waste matter then becomes caked, dry, hard and difficult to move on. Don't fail to read how Scientific research discovered an effective way to provide more gentle complete "daily" bowel movements.

SUCCESS AT LAST!
For over 40 years millions and millions of folks have been taking a "little daily dose" of Kruschen and many wrote in letters praising it to the skies. These scientists wanted to find out WHY. So they started experimenting with the "little daily dose"—a half to one teaspoonful in a glass of water in the morning and what an astounding discovery they made!

And just listen to this!—Kruschen now also comes in effervescent form—sparkling, "bubbling"—and makes one of the most refreshing, delightfully pleasant bubbling drinks you ever tasted"!

WHAT A DIFFERENCE!
Imagine these scientists' joy when they discovered what a difference Kruschen made! No violence. No griping or nausea. No purging, just gentle, soft, yet most satisfactory and complete movements without the slightest irritation.

Not in one test above did the dose have to be increased.

In fact these doctors and chemists reported "We consider this one of the most important investigations we ever made, and that the small daily dose of Kruschen is a MOST SATISFACTORY aid to keep the colon sweet, clean and free from poisonous wastes. Kruschen can be taken every day for years with no necessity to increase dosage.

HOW IT WORKS
Your [illegible] in the colon is kept moist or becomes hard, dry, caked and results in constipation. These scientists discovered that a little daily dose of Kruschen actually PRODUCES NATURE'S OWN GENTLE PLEASANT BOWEL ACTION by keeping the [illegible] moist and oft[illegible] How [illegible] daily treatment [illegible] ALSO acts [illegible]

INEXPENSIVE!
The low cost of this home treatment will amaze you. A jar of Kruschen lasts weeks and costs but a trifle. Take a half to one teaspoonful in a glass of water—don't miss a morning. And, if because of constipation you're feeling depressed, dull in mind with sleepless nights, you should soon begin to feel like a new person — Frisky as a puppy - Whole world brighter and gayer! Don't fail to get a jar TODAY. Over 245,000,000 jars of Kruschen have been sold by druggists THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. No wonder scientists wanted to find out WHY Kruschen did so much good for so many! THEY did and YOU should too, once you try it. And now that Kruschen comes in pleasant tasting "bubbling" form you, too, should get onto "the little daily dose".

GREAT NEWS!
Kruschen, made right here in U. S. A., now comes also in a most delightful tasting, "bubbling" form. Splendid for constipation as well as a mild antacid and kidney diuretic.

Locke, wife of Mayor Locke, left, and Mrs. John Pierce, Mansfield, representing the Red Cross. They were guests at the luncheon session. ## Japs Launch Bitter Attacks Because of Removal of Nazi Seamen by British.

that Japan will not be satisfied with a mere legal reply from London to the Japanese protest regarding the Asama Maru incident.

The Japanese government, it said, is demanding to know exactly what steps the British government has taken to prevent recurrence of such incidents in view of having "caused such an unpleasant incident under Japan's nose."

Furthermore, Asahi stated, Japan will demand to know what British guarantee will be given for the future regarding Japanese merchant vessels carrying Germans not engaged in military service.

A Tokyo spokesman said the Japanese navy is preparing to prevent such incidents and expressed "hope" that Britain would fully reconsidered its policy.

The spokesman reiterated the Japanese claim that the incident was a violation of international law and expressed regret that the British navy had taken action which he described as calculated to injure the prestige of the Japanese navy.

Meanwhile, the commander of the Asama Maru, Captain Watanabe, resigned from his post following newspaper criticism for "weakly yielding to the British" when the Germans were removed from his ship.

Naval authorities discussed action to be taken to aid two Japthese vessels until they reach and the Ginyo Maru, which are now en route to Yokohama with many Germans aboard.

It was reported the navy decided to keep in close touch with these vessels until they recan port, and that possibly arrangements will be made to convoy them under protection of Japanese warships.

Finland's Ski Troops Baffle Russian Forces.

HELSINKI—(AP)—Hit-skip tactacs of Finland's skiing sharpshooters are frustrating Soviet Russian mechanized units and are in large measure responsible for the entrapment of a big Red army force northeast of Lake Ladoga, Finnish sources reported today.

Excitement is growing in Helsinki, where Finns made it an open secret that something "big" is brewing northeast of the lake.

Behind the brief Finnish communiques telling of heavy fighting for the past three days in that sector, the Finns said there was this unofficial story:

Large Russian forces early in the war pushed northwestward around Lake Ladoga in an effort to flank the Karelian isthmus defenses of the Mannerheim line. Their two columns were smashed at Loimola and Syskyjarvi, about 20 miles inside Finland.

Another heavy drive, started in less pell-mell fashion, was stopped at Kitela, also a score of miles from the border and six or seven miles north of the lake.

Anxious to relieve the Kitela divisions before they could be cut to pieces in the manner of the 163rd and 44th divisions at Suomossalmi, the Russian command tried vainly to send troops across the frozen lake.

Then they sought to bring up reinforcements along the railroad from Suojarvi, 55 miles northeast of Kitela, but the Finns stopped them where the line crosses the Kollaan river near Loimola.

On the darker side for Finland is the wholesale bombing of communities behind the lines.

COPENHAGEN—(INS) — Soviet planes bombed and sank the 1,133-ton Finnish steamer Notung off the Aaland islands and then machine-gunned the crew without causing any casualties, according to reports received in Copenhagen today.

(A Reuters (British) News agency dispatch from Helsinki said Soviet planes also bombed an unnamed German merchant ship aground off the Aaland islands.)

---

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia—(U.P.)—An official communique said today that one non-commissioned officer was lost when the Jugoslav destroyer Ljubljana, 1,200 tons, was blown on the rocks by a gale while entering the Jugoslav harbor of Sibenik on the Adriatic coast.

---

AMSTERDAM—(INS)— The Norwegian steamer Biarritz, a vessel of 1,752 tons, was mined northwest of Ymuiden today. The Norwegian vessel Borgholm picked up members of the crew, some of whom were injured.

STOCKHOLM — (U.P.) — Seventeen members of the crew of the Swedish steamer Goteborg, 1,200 tons, were lost when the vessel struck a mine and sank in the North sea, it was established today.

a fresh rhythmic coloring and delightful melodic fragrance. Through the tonal tapestry of the Moussorgsky chant, the orchestra drew sombre-hued threads of the religious passion of old Russia.

The act three Prelude from "Lohengrin" is, of course, to most orchestras what Paderewski's "Minuet" is to most pianists. While it remains splendid music, it has reached a point where it must be played every so often. It is likely to be thumped and blared. The audience, however, was loud in its acclaim of last night's performance.

Most masterfully played of the entire concert, the second movement of Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik"—the singing "Romanze"—demonstrated the orchestra's skill in pianissimo effects.

Under Dr. Kindler's baton, the comparatively young musicians achieved delicacies of shading not likely to be surpassed by any group of veterans.

In the third movement of the Mozart "Little Night Music," the "Menuett," the conductor gave hints of the effective rhythmic precision he was to use strikingly in the Beethoven work.

The program opened with a pleasurable reading of Carl Maria von Weber's operatic remnant, the overture to "Oberon." And the first half of the concert concluded with three excerpts from Moussorgsky's opera "Boris Godounov."

In these excerpts, the Introduction, Coronation, and Love Music, the orchestra appeared to break the exceptional stride set for itself in "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik."

But acoustics of the auditorium stage, which was crowded with musicians, presented a severe handicap to any adequate rendition of the once-revolutionary "Boris" harmonics. The cymbalist, who figures prominently in the score, appeared crowded almost into the corridor at the rear of the stage.

Special mention goes to the only woman member of the orchestra for her playing of the harp cadenza in the introduction to the Tschaikowsky encore and to the entire cello section. An explanation of the outstanding work by the latter group may lie in the fact that Dr. Kindler is himself a virtuoso cellist in addition to being a conductor of note.

On the whole, last night's concert proved so thoroughly enjoyable that it must give local members of the Civic Music association hearty confidence in their talent committee and whet their musical appetites for the appearance of Gladys Swarthout, March 11, in the final concert of this year's series.

Republican in the house voted for the payment, and a good many Democrats. The 'must' Democrats heard their master's voice again. The people of Ohio are smart enough to know that it is a steal."

Rep. Dudley A. White, R., O., said Mr. Roosevelt's veto was a "slap at Gov. John Bricker."

"The president," he said, "is trying to crucify Ohio as a further step in his recent attempt to stigmatize the state in the relief quarrel.

"This is a continuation of the quarrel with Bricker. The old age pensioners of the state suffer. It's a dead beat decision on the part of the federal government. The president is trying to take out his spite."

White argued that even if Davey "did play politics," that's not the fault of the people of Ohio."

The president's message said that investigations of the Social Security board prior to September, 1938, "indicated the existence of certain important defects in the administration of the old age assistance plan in the state of Ohio."

Bricker Hits 'Political Whims' of Roosevelt.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Gov. John W. Bricker charged today that President Roosevelt's veto of the Ohio old age pension bill struck at "125,000 innocent persons" on the state's pension rolls.

"The government of this country," the governor said, "has reached a sorry pass when the political whim of one man can punish a sovereign state and deprive thousands of aged pensioners of what is rightfully theirs.

"The president's veto action shows he has no interest in Ohio's old age pensioners, only a selfish desire to exercise political power. This is but another evidence of the unfair attitude of the present administration toward Ohio.

"This time it has resulted in hitting at 125,000 innocent persons who are on Ohio's pension rolls. The money provided by the Jenkins bill is justly due Ohio.

"This is a clear thwarting of the will of the people expressed through their congress.

"No bureaucratic authority at Washington should have the power to punish a sovereign state or deprive the needy to satisfy a political prejudice. The people of Ohio who have paid this money in taxes have a right to and do resent this bureaucratic arrogance and threat to the authority of this state.

Arneson, in Mansfield today as guest speaker at the Kiwanis club luncheon at the Mansfield-Leland hotel, said he "hadn't decided yet" whether he will enter the special primary race.

Meanwhile two more counties joined Richland in protesting to Gov. Bricker against the holding of the special election. They based their protests on the cost of the primary and election which has been estimated at $75,000 in the six counties for both elections.

Licking county officials registered their protest yesterday and Knox county commissioners planned to go to Columbus today for the same purpose. County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe wrote the governor last week protesting the cost.

In Cleveland Ray T. Miller, former mayor and leader of one faction in Cuyahoga county's two-way split, criticized Bricker today for calling a special election to fill the 22nd district congressional seat left vacant last fall by the death of C. C. Bolton, Cleveland Republican.

Miller estimated the special primary and election would cost $125,000.

"This is a big price to pay for a congressman who will just about have enough time to get to Washington, qualify and answer 'present' before the current session ends," Miller said.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1940.

Seems odd how well folks got along twenty years ago without things that are now "necessities."

History can be very depressing, especially when it says ancient Rome had a depression lasting 1,400 years.

Unless the government debt can be extended above the forty-five billion mark there'd be no advantage in giving Mr. Roosevelt a third term.

People of Ohio Are Real Losers

AFTER house and senate decided that Ohio should be reimbursed for $1,388,160 social security payments withheld in October, 1938, during a squabble with the Davey administration, President Roosevelt concludes otherwise and has vetoed the bill passed by congress, authorizing payment.

It was contended by the federal social security board, when payment was withheld, that Ohio's administration of the old-age assistance plan was defective and not in accord with federal requirements. This was denied by Martin L. Davey, who was then governor, and a wordy battle ensued. Pensions for that month were paid entirely from state funds and efforts have continued ever since to secure reimbursement from the federal government.

Justice of the claim was apparently recognized from the start, but quibbling with the Davey regime, and later technical differences in ideas about how reimbursement should be made, delayed action until a few days ago, when both houses of congress passed the bill introduced by Representative Jenkins, of Ohio.

President Roosevelt's stated reasons for vetoing the bill have the appearance of classing as "exemplary" punishment of Ohio for the shortcomings of a former governor, rather than being based on consideration of conditions as they now are, or as they were immediately corrected after payment was withheld. The president's veto message will, he says, "serve notice on every state in the union that all kinds of federal aid must be conditioned on full compliance with the federal law and wholly without discrimination or inefficiency."

Or, in other words, Governor Davey and his administrative associates were "naughty boys" and didn't mind their Washington Papa, so the people of this state are to be spanked to the extent of $1,388,160—in order that politicians in all other states will be properly warned that they must behave themselves if they expect Santa Claus to come.

Weakness In Civil Service

CIVIL SERVICE is one of those excellent institutions of which the public expects much in the way of governmental honesty and efficiency. But civil service, like democracy itself, isn't a magic formula which will work without help from good citizens.

For example, a civil service commissioner in one city tells of a recent examination at which no persons without political special interest appeared. Fewer persons passed the examination than there were jobs to be filled. Two of the applicants were already holding temporary appointments in the division in which permanent appointments were to be made.

In that city there is a fine engineering school, many of whose well trained graduates have been having a hard time in recent years to get jobs paying them in proportion to their ability. Almost any of them, said the commissioner, could have passed the examination easily and would then have been practically sure of a job at better pay than he could receive for some time to come in a private engineering office.

It is another field that is left rather scornfully to the politicians, who are then blamed for using it to their own selfish or partisan advantage.

State Should Aid Village Police

EXISTENCE of what has been rather extravagantly termed a "crime wave" in the village of Loudonville gives additional support to an idea that the state should develop some sort of crime-detection department through which trained men could be made available to small communities for special service immediately after a major crime, or when there is an epidemic of minor crimes, as has been experienced in Loudonville during the past couple of weeks.

It is quite evident that no villages, or even small cities, can meet the cost of detectives and expert law enforcement officers, or provide facilities available to large cities and to the state.

Restriction of the state highway patrol to limited jurisdiction, instead of giving these officers full police powers, is another handicap to law enforcement and crime detection in smaller communities, as an augmented state patrol, authorized to act in any case of law violation, could be made a valuable aid to local authorities.

In all probability the numerous petty crimes that have been disturbing Loudonville will be cleared up soon and the culprits apprehended and punished, but similar annoyances will break out from time to time in other villages and towns, until some better form of protection has been developed. It seems quite proper that the state of Ohio should take the initiative along this line rather than continue to require small communities to shift for themselves.

Auto Safety Devices

A CORONER knows a good deal about automobile accidents and his suggestions for preventing them ought to be worth considering.

Such an official in an Iowa county expresses a number of safety ideas in the Journal of the American Medical Association. First, he thinks windshields should fall outward easily, without breaking, when struck with a force of fifty or more pounds from the inside. That would prevent many serious and often fatal head and neck injuries occurring when a passenger is thrown against a windshield rigidly held and made of strong shatterproof glass.

Other suggestions ask for bumpers entirely around the car, with removable sections for changing tires; improved highway markings on the pavement and in the line of vision, streamlining that puts the fenders in the car body; and compulsory tests after accidents to discover drivers' abnormalities.

The all-around bumper has been urged by many car drivers for years. The other suggestions either have been hinted at already or need further study. It is plain, however, that the safety factor will be more and more stressed hereafter in building cars, as performance and beauty have been stressed in the past.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The "model federation" outlined by Prime Minister Chamberlain follows the rough outlines of "Plan Number Two" long under discussion by economists here as a basis for peace and commercial harmony in Europe.

Doubtless, it is a bit jarring to Secretary of State Hull, for it doesn't dove-tail too well into his trade agreements program in so far as the latter is based on the principle of "most favored nation" treatment.

The Chamberlain plan, as now worked out between France and England, is a tightly-knit relationship. It would require some major adjustments, either on the part of the European federation or on the part of Secretary Hull's trade agreements program.

France and England have agreed to stabilize their currencies against each other. For practical purposes, they have boiled francs and pounds together into a monetary stew out of which the two units of money come with the same flavor, even when they retain their characteristic sizes.

They agree to co-ordinate their purchases, so one will not bid against the other for supplies bought elsewhere. They agree first to buy from each other, and to go elsewhere only later.

Presumably they will regulate their tariff schedules so each can work most advantageously with the other.

Not for the U. S.

NOW it is easy to see that such a system will work admirably only when the government exercises a completely controlling hand in each country, just as it does in those countries now. No free trading country such as the United States could get into that show and come out with a whole skin. It would have to exercise the same controls over its commerce and currency that France and England exercise. Just now, of course, it is working out fairly well for the United States because the two war associates are willing and eager to buy all they can in this country and are not in a position to blackjack us into unhappy terms.

Rigid as this plan sounds, it may be the one that finally will evolve for Europe and, for a time at least, for the rest of the world when the war ends. All the countries involved are fairly likely to follow the German pattern of bilateral trade agreements for a time until they can expand them into three or four or many-sided agreements along the Chamberlain lines.

In any such event they would all have to agree on certain values for their currency, on equalized tariff schedules, and a carefully measured give-and-take in financial arrangements which would permit each country to have a balanced trade. It never would do for one nation to get caught with an "unfavorable" balance of trade even for a single year. Each would need an agreement with one or more nations to equalize the trade in some fashion, either through direct sale of goods, or through loans.

Free Trade Idea.

SECRETARY HULL has sought a system of free and open trade under which a nation would feel perfectly safe in buying when and where it wished without fear that it would find itself with banks full of blocked foreign currency. That is "Plan Number One," casually referred to here as the "old system."

Nevertheless, even Hull has had to modify his plan piece by piece in the direction of a more closely regulated trade. In some of the trade agreements it has been necessary not only to agree on quotas, but to base the whole treaty on currency agreements. That was one of the stumbling blocks over which the Argentine-U. S. negotiators finally sprawled.

Whether and how soon this government will be willing to take the next big step and agree to lend money abroad in order to equalize trade is a speculation.

Perhaps the United States, since it has most of the gold, will be able to temper the Chamberlain plan in the general direction of Hull's unhampered international trade.

Timely Editorial

Those Depressing Blackouts.

Every correspondent who goes from one of the warring nations to a neutral country invariably comments on one thing: the lift to his spirits in getting away from the depressing night blackouts into cities that are gay with lights. In this favored land we read of the blackout regulations in England, France and Germany, and they make little impression. But evidently to the people who live in these countries they are one of the real hardships of war. To go out at night and stumble along black streets, to see taxis crawling with headlights shrouded, to find restaurants with windows covered so as not to let a beam filter through, all these experiences are calculated to dampen the most exuberant soul.

A few generations ago our ancestors got along with lanterns to guide them at night and thought nothing of it. But the present generation is accustomed to something different and only when people are thrust back into the darkness do they appreciate how much the lights of a city contribute to the sparkle of life.—Kansas City Times.

Rheumatism Most Prevalent Disease.

—By DR. CLENDENING

What is the most frequent disease in North America?

Acute inflammatory rheumatism is first in prevalence, second in producing disability, second in producing invalidism and 14th in causing death in the United States. There are 6,850,000 patients who have or who have had inflammatory rheumatism out of our population of 127,000,000. There are almost twice as many cases as there are of heart disease.

The disability and invalidism are produced by the damage which acute inflammatory rheumatism does to the heart. It is a frequent cause of valvular disease of the heart. In order to prevent this complication, no matter how light the case may be, the patient, especially a child, should be kept at bed rest or as close to bed rest as possible for six weeks after the acute condition has subsided.

What is meant by the "six somatic senses"?

The five special senses, of course, are sight, hearing, smell, taste, and feeling. We have, however, many other senses. The six somatic senses are called "temperature," "equilibrium," "hunger," "thirst," "muscle sense" and "pain."

Temperature—The skin has terminal nerves to receive feeling and also to notice heat and cold and other special sensations. There are about 30,000 tiny spots on the surface of the body that are sensitive to warmth and about 250,000 similar spots sensitive to cold. When the skin temperature rises, only the warm spots are stimulated. When ice or snow touches the skin, only the cold spots are stimulated. On a very hot day or on standing over a radiator, both hot and cold spots are stimulated. That is why it is so uncomfortable.

Equilibrium—The sense of your position in space is governed by end organs located near the organ of hearing in the skull, the semi-circular canals. When you whirl around rapidly or ride on a merry-go-round, these canals are over-stimulated and the fluid inside them is disturbed, which puts you off your balance. The reeling drunken man has poisoned the cells of his semi-circular canals.

Hunger is a general bodily sensation, probably produced by contractions of the stomach.

Thirst is felt most acutely in the mouth, but it is a general bodily sensation because it can be relieved by injecting fluid into a vein.

Muscle sense enables you to judge roughly the weight of an object which you lift from the floor. It also allows you to judge your distance from an object.

Pain may be either a localized or general bodily sense. General pain arises from fatigue.

When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers they shall overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. Isaiah 43.2.

Turn That Grave Into a Shrine.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DON'T let them tell you that time will cure the cruel ache of that loss . . . the racking nights . . . the huddled, hopeless dawns. It won't.

Don't let them kid you into thinking that someday you'll forget the sting of that shame . . . the scar of that double crossing. You can't.

Life isn't made that way. Love that's great enough to leave such a loss can't be healed by time. Pride that's sensitive enough to feel such a scar can't be forgotten. Natures rich enough to be so hurt bear the mark of it always.

So don't go kidding yourself that time will turn and make you the carefree youngster you were yesterday. Don't go waiting until your heart and head are healed and happy and new. Don't keep telling yourself that you'll take a fresh chance—when you've forgot the old bad deal. For you never will . . . never can . . . life doesn't work like that!

Yet, nevertheless, Life works! Goes on working, in spite of everything. In spite of pain . . . and hate and failure and shame . . . in spite of broken hearts and betrayal. Nothing can stop Life. Life goes on. And that's where your break comes in!

YOU CAN LIVE WITH LIFE!

IF YOU CAN'T FORGET, YOU CAN REMEMBER . . . AND PUT THAT MEMORY TO WORK . . . WHICH IS A MILLION TIMES BETTER THAN THE FANCIEST FORGETTING.

And if the scar won't heal, you can keep it open . . . for the understanding and the blessing of all other scars . . . which is no end jollier than the most decorative bandage.

"I never knew
"How I could laugh
"Till my heart broke!"

—sang valiant Edna St. Vincent Millay.

There's the creed of the great ones, the courageous ones, the triumphant ones.

Anyone can mourn over a grave—

BUT IT TAKES A WISE AND FREE AND BATTLING SOUL TO TURN THAT GRAVE INTO A SHRINE.

I'm thinking of Lou Gehrig as I write this. Gallant, grinning Lou Gehrig who took his blackout without flinching—and left all America the braver for his spunk.

"Die by inches?" Not he! He'd teach them to LIVE BY MINUTES. So Lou Gehrig, who could have gotten $200,000 a year, just for the use of his name, accepted Mayor La Guardia's offer to be New York City parole commissioner with $6,000 a year, instead—TEACHING MEN TO LIVE!

There was a man who turned his grave into a shrine! And you've only to walk a block to meet them by the score. Women whose hearts are mothering all the babes in the world, because their one has gone. Men who are dragging others up out of darkness and slime, because they'd known shame themselves, once upon a time!

DON'T ASK THAT PAIN BE LESSENED! THANK GOD THAT YOU CAN FEEL IT . . . THANK GOD THAT YOU CAN USE IT . . . AND ASK THE HELP OF THOSE CRUCIFIED HANDS TO TURN YOUR GRAVE INTO A SHRINE!

The Bee Man

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IT WAS a cold blustery day when I had the pleasure of visiting the home of a federal bee inspector. A drifted sheet of snow had blown across the narrow porch. "I swept it off just a while ago," apologized the mistress of the house, as she opened the door for me, and invited me into the generous, well kept warmth of the interior. Her husband was working in the cellar. I was not surprised to find him a slender middle-aged man with a generous, happy looking wrinkled face and bushy iron-gray hair. I have often thought that men who work with bees have, usually, kindly countenances, and wondered why.

"How far do you travel over the state?" I asked.

"From the central part north. My work keeps me in close touch with county agents and farmers who are interested in even a few hives of bees. I was down in your county last week. I'd advise anyone to go slow on bees there, until he has tried out a few hives for a year or two."

"Why?" I asked.

"There is quite a lot of disease down there," he said, "and not everybody will join in our clean-up. You can't do much in the bee business without co-operation. A few colonies of infected bees will spoil the chances of all those near about."

"Last summer," said I, "I saw two hollow trees with strong colonies in them."

"Those should be cut down and the honey used," he said. "Such shelters are almost sure to be infected, and cause trouble for adjacent bee keepers."

"Do you keep bees in connection with your work?" I asked.

"Indeed yes," he smiled. "You don't see any here. I farm them out over northwestern Ohio. One good hive will often produce a hundred pounds. Farmers invite me to place them near their orchards or about their sweet clover alfalfa or alsike fields. I leave them on the same place for some time, look after them myself, and give the farmer a share of the honey."

I was warmed when I left, not only with furnace heat, but with the thought of busy bees among the clover meadows of early summer.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It was a stroke, and not a fall, that caused the death of Senator Borah. He was stricken only a few hours after he had been assured he was in excellent health.

The tragic details of the great Idahoan's end are as follows:

Following his serious illness last summer, Borah was very careful about himself, and on Monday, Jan. 15, he underwent a physical examination. Around 4 p. m. he telephoned Mrs. Borah (affectionately known as "Little Borah") in high spirits.

"Mary," he said jubilantly, "the doctor tells me that I'm in the best condition I've been in for several years."

Borah then spent an hour or so in his office dictating and reading. Then he drove home, where he ate a light supper, and after running through several newspapers, retired about 9 o'clock. He rose at 8 the next morning, his usual hour, and appeared to be in good health, inquiring cheerfully of Mrs. Borah how she had slept.

Mrs. Borah heard him turn on the water in the shower. Ten minutes later she heard it still running and went to the door, which was closed, and knocked. There was no answer. She waited a few moments and then knocked again. No answer. Then she tried to open the door, but couldn't.

Frightened, she called the maid and together they were able to open the door. The reason Mrs. Borah had been unable to push it open was because the senator had fallen against it.

It was this that gave rise to the report that he had fallen and injured himself. But when Dr. Worth Daniels arrived, he immediately diagnosed the case as a cerebral hemorrhage. Borah never regained consciousness. Several prominent consultants were called in Tuesday afternoon, but they shook their heads.

It was after their visit that Mrs. Borah courageously allowed the press to be informed that her husband was dying.

No Plans.

MRS. BORAH'S plans for the future are still uncertain—except for one thing.

She has definitely decided to give up the spacious, beautifully furnished apartment in which she and the senator lived for many years. It was their only home. They had none in Idaho. When they returned there in the summer they lived in a Boise hotel.

The senator left a small estate which, with the $10,000 which widows of members of congress receive, will enable Mrs. Borah to live comfortably. Borah could have made big money, but he always refused. He had many offers of legal cases; and a few years ago he was handed a contract by a newspaper syndicate for $52,000 to write a weekly, 1200-word article. But he rigidly adhered to the rule that he was an employe of the people and that they were entitled to his full time.

Borah was so meticulous about this that when, during his fourth term, congress increased senatorial pay from $7,500 to $10,000 a year, he refused to accept the additional $2,500 until re-elected.

Mrs. Borah has a sister in Moscow, Idaho, and another in Portland, Ore. She will visit them before deciding where she will settle permanently. In the past, she has had a number of requests to write about Washington and about her many experiences in the official and social world. She has always declined, but now she may turn her gentle wit and charm to such work.

Anno Domino.

SENATOR HENRY ASHURST, courtly Arizona veteran and one of Borah's closest senate friends, had a strange experience with him the day before he was stricken.

Ashurst's seat is directly across the aisle from Senator George Norris, who had been away for several weeks having a physical check-up at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. He returned to the senate that day and Ashurst was greeting him just as Borah, who sat next to Norris, come in.

"Bill," said Ashurst, "I was just telling George how well he looks. He tells me the doctors didn't find a thing wrong with him."

"That's fine, George," smiled Borah. "It's good to have you back."

"George," continued Ashurst, "you didn't have to go to Baltimore to find out what's wrong with you. I could have told you. It's very simple. All us old timers have it. We're suffering from Anno Domino, that's all, just plain Anno Domino."

Merry-Go-Round.

MRS. BOB TAFT, wife of Ohio's GOP "favorite son," doesn't play bridge, but she can make a better political speech than her husband. . . . The SEC is quietly investigating a Wall Street "bear raid" on securities of the $800,000,000 Standard Gas and Electric company last week, following inside reports that the raid was staged by utility interests as part of a campaign to discredit the young head of the U. S. Steel corporation, is high among the possibilities for assistant secretary of navy, made vacant when Charles Edison was elected to the cabinet. . . . Townsendites have picked St. Louis and June 30 as the place and date for their convention this year. Politicos are much interested in the timing, because it is before the two national nominating conventions. In 1936, Townsend teamed up with Father Coughlin against both Roosevelt and Landon.

Birthday Gift.

THE PRESIDENT is going to reverse the usual order this year and send congress a gift on his birthday, January 30.

It will consist of a special message uring a $10,000,000 appropriation for the construction of 25 hospitals, in various parts of the country to be designed by the Public Health service and the American Medical society. He went out of his way to choose his birthday to submit this plan, and he will describe it as the first step in an ultimate nationwide health-insurance program.

The president also will emphasize in his message that while the federal government should take the initiative in building the hospitals, the localities must maintain them.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran tried to persuade him to recommend a certain amount of federal aid for upkeep. Parran proposed one dollar per day per patient. But Roosevelt rejected this.

"Nope, that's out," he told the Interdepartmental Health Program committee headed by Miss Josephine Roche. "It's all right for the government to build them, but the localities must operate them. We want to tie the localities directly up to these hospitals so that they will have a personal interest in them."

Note—Significantly, at the conclusion of the conference the president directed Miss Roche to continue work on formulating a national health-insurance program, even though there is no chance of passing anything of this nature at the present session of congress.

LIKE A PARADE

Ballad Has Color and Action, Too, Prof Tells Optimists.

K. G. Lind, professor of English and journalism at Wittenberg college, discussed the development of balladry in addressing the Optimist club at a luncheon yesterday noon at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

In his "little excursion in the boundless field of literature" he said that a ballad is like a street parade—full of color and action, long enough to be interesting, too short to pall.

Lind pointed to an 18th century revival of folk literature in England which rescued much of the foundling literature that otherwise would have been lost, and to an early 20th century effort in the United States which salvaged some of the nation's best loved folk lore.

Russell Gimbel was program chairman of the meeting.

Reveals How to Combat Costly Fowl Paralysis

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(INS)—Fowl paralysis, that takes an estimated 25 per cent toll of the nation's poultry flocks, can be combatted by sanitation, Dr. J. Holmes Martin, Michigan State college laboratory director, announced after studying the costly disease more than a year.

Dr. Martin said:

"We definitely have isolated resistant and susceptible strains in poultry. The susceptibility factor seems of little value except for research."

"It is still a mystery how the paralysis is transmitted, although there is little doubt it is a virus and a filth-borne disease. Sanitation, therefore, can be preventive. In three pens with strict sanitary control we found no sick birds in one, one suspicious case in another and one definite case in the third."

MANSFIELD CLUBS HAVE BUSINESS MEETINGS

Plays Read Before Members of Conversational, Student Clubs at Wednesday Sessions; Planning Coming Events.

WEDNESDAY witnessed the meetings of several of the city's study clubs, as programs and business became the occupation of the day and evening. The Women's Club was the scene of the meeting of the Conversational club, while Mrs. Charles Kuntz, 441 Glessner avenue, entertained the Student club.

A program of play readings was presented yesterday afternoon during the meeting of the Conversational club, with Mrs. Fannie Carrier as hostess. Mrs. Frank Wendt gave Evelyn Emig's "The China Pig," while Mrs. Merritt Giles read a one-act comedy, "For Distinguished Service," by Florence Clay Knox.

Gets Job, Then Drops Girlfriend

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I really don't know what happened to make us break up. We had been going together for almost two years, and were practically engaged. He wasn't working then, but we planned to marry when he got a permanent job. But when he got the job he turned indifferent, and now I see him only occasionally.

It's terribly embarrassing when my friends ask about him and I know they imagine all sorts of things. ROSE.

When a young man drops you for no reason at all, it is a very good thing to fall back on your pride and show him that you don't care. I can't advise you too strongly to stop discussing this young man with your friends. It is cheapening to yourself. And remember that fine old proverb: There are still as good fish in the sea as ever were caught.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We've been married for 10 years and have a son seven years old. I don't believe my husband cares for me any more, because he makes a big fuss over other women. He seldom takes me out with him, and when he does he hardly notices me, but pays attention to the other women. I've often wondered whether or not I should leave him. R. N.

Before a wife considers leaving her husband, she should ask herself these questions: Shall I be able to provide for myself and child, living apart from my husband? If I have no source of income, what is my earning capacity?

Women who have small children cannot indulge in the luxury of rushing off because their husbands are indifferent, or overattentive to other women. The welfare of children should be the chief consideration of a conscientious mother.

WHEN Bill Powell and his new bride, Diana Lewis, take that honeymoon, they are hoping to go to Honolulu, or if this isn't possible they may compromise on New York. She is wearing a square-cut diamond THAT big above her wedding ring and she has a charm bracelet, a gift from Bill, which spells out "Dearest" in the flag code system. . . . Bette Davis' 35 changes of costume in "All This and Heaven Too" will set a record, Warners believe. . . . Arthur Treacher, the No. 1 film butler, has written an original screen story called "The Butler Goes Berserk," which one of the directors is now considering.

Peggy Moran plays the feminine lead

Underworld Story

Demonstrating how far underworld big-shots will go in their efforts to buy protection, the mystery film "One Hour to Live," comes to the Majestic theater on Friday to run through Saturday. Featuring Charles Bickford as the detective who arrests John Litel, crime syndicate leader, after Litel marries Doris Nolan, Bickford's former fiancee in the story, it is said to be a smashing indictment of crooked officials who betray positions of trust for illicit personal gain. Bob Steele in "Mesquite Buckaroo" is the second feature.

Mystery Drama.

Johnny Mack Brown is featured in "Trail of Vengeance," which opens Friday and continues through Saturday at the Ritz theater. The co-feature is "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island," which tells of the detective crossing the ghostly path of murder by magic at the World's Fair playground on the Pacific. Sidney Toler again plays the famous Earl Derr Biggers sleuth, who faces his most baffling case when death springs from the psychic arrow of a master of the occult—a mystery which Chan defies the supernatural to unravel.

Thrill-Loaded Features.

Two pictures will be shown at the Park theater Friday and Saturday. They are Jack London's "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," starring Paul Lukas, Lyn Harding, Kathleen Kelley and Clifford Evans, and "The Fighting Gringo" with George O'Brien as the star. This story deals with the unscrupulous land-thieves who forced owners of Spanish grants to abandon their land.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

CAN YOU RUN NINE TRICKS?

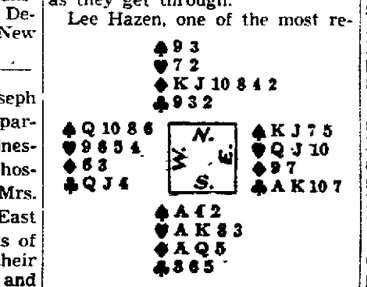
YOU NEED only nine tricks to make a game in No Trump. You can afford to let the opponents take the first four, if you can then get the rest. Not even the running of an entire suit by them can hurt you if it is only four cards long. So if the bidding by their side makes it appear as if they have no more than four cards in your unstopped suit, it is perfectly sound to try 3-No Trumps against them when you reckon nine consecutive-tricks are in sight as soon as they get through.

Lee Hazen, one of the most recent arrivals in the ranks of the great masters, outpointed a great pair on this deal. Sherman Stearns in the East bid 1-Club, Mr. Hazen doubled in the South, Mel Alexander in the North bid 1-Diamond, Mr. Hazen 1-Heart, Walter Malowan in the West 1-Spade, then came 2-Diamonds from North, 2-Spades from East, 3-Diamonds from South, 3-Spades from West, and this passed around to Mr. Hazen.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

He had heard his partner answer his double with 1-Diamond. Later, after his own 1-Heart and Mr. Marlowan's 1-Spade, he had heard his partner make a free retid of 2-Diamonds. Doing that on a suit so weak that he lacked the major tenace honors, held by Mr. Hazen, indicated probably at least a six-card suit. In other words, nine tricks should be in sight unless the opponents could run more than four clubs first.

Since that suit had been bid only once, to open the hand, it probably was no more than four cards in length. So Mr. Hazen bid 3-No Trumps and made it, winning the hand for his team.

The farmers of New York state have a better outlook for 1940, according to New York State Agriculture college.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I made my answer to Philip Veritzen's query short, swift and to the point.

"Of course you may see her, and that at once," I told him cordially. "Come with me!"

But he hesitated curiously.

"When she left her mother's apartment a few minutes ago," he said slowly, "she seemed to me to be somewhat upset nervously. Is she all right now?"

"She appears perfectly all right to me," I told him.

"Then please take me to her at once," he said. "Lillian, will you—"

But Lillian was halfway across the hall.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I have something very important simmering over the fire, and I must stir it."

I knocked lightly on the door, and when I heard Olina's answering voice, calm, controlled, bidding me come in, I knew that she would keep the pledge she had made to me and to herself.

When Philip Veritzen had followed me in, he passed me and went directly up to the tall, beautifully poised figure of the princess. Then, putting out his hands, took hers in his, and bent to kiss them with the formal elaborate courtesy which he knows so well how to use.

"My dear child!" he said when he had raised his head again. "I have something very wonderful to tell you. I came straight to you because I want you to be the first to know."

I saw Olina stiffen ever so slightly, but her eyes showed warm receptive interest.

"Your mother has made me the happiest of men," Philip Veritzen said. "She has promised to marry me, very soon. I hope you approve."

"My dear daughter," the great theatrical magnate murmured, his head bowed over hers. When he raised it again and I saw his eyes I was astonished to see their brilliance suffused with a softness perilously close to moisture and totally foreign to anything I ever had seen in those eyes before.

"You have made me very happy," he told her, and I admired his wisdom in not pressing her for definite vocal approval of his engagement to her mother. Then he released her, lingeringly, as if she were something very precious and said softly:

"Your mother bade me ask you to come to her as soon as possible. But first, what is the favor you wished to ask of me? Please consider it already granted. I am in a mood today to give all my possessions away."

"I think Mrs. Graham would better tell you," Olina said, plainly but prettily embarrassed. "I already have asked her about it, and she can explain everything much better than I can. And—I really ought to go to Maman immediately."

I guessed that remorse was impelling her to the side of her mother, whom she had tried meanly to trick, but Philip Veritzen, of course, saw only beautiful filial emotion in her eagerness, and instantly put his seal of approval upon it.

"Of course you must go to your mother at once," he said. "But come back when she releases you, and in the meantime Mrs. Graham will tell me what it is that you wish."

"Thank you," Olina said. "I will come back when Maman permits me."

His eyes followed her graceful progress along the hall, and then came back to me.

"And now, my dear," he said, "for this favor the child wants. I suppose she wants to witness a rehearsal or meet a matinee idol."

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

Why should South, playing for 6-No Trumps, decide to finesse against West for the club jack?

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, January 26.

Very definite progress may be made on this day, particularly in breaking up long-crystallized or static conditions, according to the lunar transits. This will be through hard work, sound judgment and a firm grasp of impending circumstances. Rash or impulsive attack would prove hazardous. Change, removal or travel might be advisable.

Those whose birthday it is have the promise of a year in which difficult or static conditions may be profitably manipulated by energy and application, shrewd insight into causes and frustrations, and by the advice and co-operation of elders or other wise heads. Rash, impulsive and extravagant conduct would be perilous, change of plans and environs advisable.

A child born on this day may be deep, studious, serious and dependable, although prone to be stubborn, set and dogmatic. Yet, it may have originality and some definitely progressive ideas for group benefit.

Both the 60th and 75th marriage anniversaries are known as diamond weddings.

NO IRRITATION TO HANDS IN NEW SUDS FOR DISHES

Women find new type suds gives dishes and glassware amazing sparkle, yet hands stay soft because this suds is not a soap and thus contains no acid or alkali to irritate the skin. An amazing improvement on even finest soaps and soap flakes.

IF YOU have ever been ashamed of coarse, red hands . . . if you have ever wondered what robbed your fingers of their dainty smoothness . . . chances are it's the alkali from the soap you use for washing dishes.

That's why thousands of women are switching to Vel, the new soapless suds perfected by Colgate that contains no acid, no alkali to irritate the skin.

It's startling how you can wash dishes time after time without a trace of the irritation to hands resulting from soaps. Vel is so easy on hands, women joyfully report it "takes the curse out of dishwashing." Glassware and china sparkle with glittering highlights, because Vel—unlike soap—cannot form soap-scum to streak glassware, dishes and silverware.

Vel is also the ideal suds for silks and woolens because it works perfectly in cold water and because it can't leave soap-scum to make fresh colors dull and frowsy-looking. Buy Vel today at any grocer's. Made and guaranteed by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company.

IN HARD-WATER TOWNS

U. S. Government Survey shows thousands of communities listed as "hard-water" towns. If your water is hard, Vel suds delight you more than ever because

Vel makes hardest water act soft as rainwater

Vel outlasts pure soap 2 to 1 in hardest water

Vel makes as much as 5 times more suds than expensive soap flakes in hardest water

VEL IS A NEUTRAL HYDROPHILIC DETERGENT

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This at Home

Saves You Much Money, and It's So Easily Mixed.

Here's an old home remedy your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar in 1 cup water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—a child could do it.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Serious Consequences Seen as U. S.-Jap Treaty Ends

ISSUE VIEWED AS FACTOR IN ORIENTAL WAR

Writer Believes Abrogation of Pact Might Determine Outcome of Strife.

(AP Foreign Affairs Writer)

Washington tomorrow will mark finis to the American-Japanese commercial treaty—an end likely to create bigger history than did ever the life of this pact, which dies amidst harsh words.

Over in the busy Chinese port of Tsingtao on the Yellow sea, former Premier Wang Ching-Wei is straining every nerve to complete a new central government designed to rule China's 450,000,000—with the blessing of Japan.

Offhand it might seem farfetched to suggest a connection between these two events. Yet they represent cause and effect, in an issue which may determine the outcome of Japan's conquest of China and effort to establish politico-economic domination of eastern Asia. It's this way:

America's abrupt abrogation of the treaty, because of unsatisfactory response to many charges of violation of our rights in China by Japan, jeopardizes the vast trade between the two countries. Commerce now will proceed on a day-to-day basis and subject to embargo by the United States at any moment.

From Japan's standpoint an embargo might spell disaster. Quite apart from the fact that she might lose a customer who bought her silks and other goods with lavish hand, she is dependent on us for some two-thirds of her essential military supplies with which to wage war. At this unhappy moment Nippon has no alternative market from which to buy these all-important materials.

But within the vast reaches of China which Japan has overrun in the past two and a half years of invasion there lie great riches—indeed, most of the things which Nippon needs to make her independent of the western world. The Japanese claim to have "conquered" more than one-third of China's population and area, including the wealthiest provinces and industrial centers.

Japan has been anxiously endeavoring to consolidate and develop her conquest, and has made progress. She has been gravely handicapped, however, by the lack of a strong and amenable central Chinese government.

Ousted By Kai-Shek.

For about a year the Japanese have been trying ineffectually to form a government under Wang, who was ousted from the regime of Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of Chinese hosts who are fighting the invasion.

Wang Ching-Wei, whose projected government already has been virtually recognized by Italy, is said to have agreed with Japan to peace terms for China. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek declares these terms are such as to make China a protectorate, which isn't surprising since Japan has made her intention to dominate eastern Asia quite clear.

What the end of all this will be isn't apparent. If affairs move well for Japan, Tokyo isn't likely to recede much from her policy of ousting the western powers from China. Should the Chinese conquest go badly, and should trade relations with America become such as to squeeze Japan seriously, then one would expect Tokyo to become decidedly more receptive to Washington's demands.

TRACY TO RUN

Former State Auditor To Seek Nomination As Auditor.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Joseph T. Tracy, Columbus, state auditor from 1921 to 1937, will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for his former post, it was indicated today when he secured nominating petitions from Secretary of State Earl Griffith.

Tracy served four terms and was beaten at the 1938 election for his fifth term.

HUNT PRESSED

Holdup Victim Dies, Cleveland Searches For 2nd Gunman.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Police pressed their hunt for a second gunman today after the death of Edward J. Erdody, 56-year-old furrier shot resisting a holdup in his Euclid avenue store.

Joseph Dimarco, 24, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was captured in a bullet-punctured chase, but a second man escaped despite wounds.

Detective Inspector Joseph Sweeney said Dimarco denied the shooting.

continuation of the committee earlier this week.

Most of the pro-third term resolutions said that they reflected the unanimous desire of the local membership, but there was no indication of how substantial a portion of the UMWA's claimed 600,000 members they represented. Leaders estimated that their total membership has increased about 300,000 under protection of New Deal labor laws in the last seven years.

Where They're From.

Twenty-seven of the third term resolutions came from West Virginia, six from Pennsylvania, four from Kentucky, three from Virginia, two from Ohio and Tennessee, and one each from Alabama, Wyoming, and Maryland.

State Rushes Food To 150,000 Ducks Stranded On Lake

SANDUSKY — (AP) — Stormbound wild ducks — caught between the usual Arctic cold and mystifying southern snows — quacked a thankful greeting today to state-given food.

The Ohio division of conservation rushed grain to the frozen Lake Erie area where thousands — possibly 150,000 — of game birds halted a bewildering migration in search of warm weather.

Commissioner Don Waters, hearing that some of the ducks already were so weak they couldn't fly ordered game protectors to scatter grain to save the ducks from starvation.

A late winter delayed the southern flight from Canada, Waters said, and then the ducks turned back northward when they found snow in the south. He said he expected the ducks to continue their journey with a change in the weather.

QUADS GAINING

WORKMAN WHO CAUGHT FALLING STEEPLEJACK CITED AS HERO

(By Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH — A doughty boiler maker who caught a falling steeplejack and saved him from probable death received recognition as a hero today.

One of 16 bronze medals awarded by the Carnegie Hero Fund commission for acts of heroism went to Theodore Bennett, 34, who maneuvered in split seconds to catch Charles Von Gossett, 75, at the end of a 55-foot wall from a smokestack at Mobile, Ala.

When they untangled themselves on the ground, it was found Von Gossett suffered only minor injuries, Bennett, however, was disabled for 10 weeks with a dislocated hip.

Other acts cited by the commission included rescues from death by drowning, gas, fire, trains and an attack by a shark while bathing. Eleven states were represented in the awards.

The commission awarded bronze medals to two young Ohio men for rescuing five boys from drowning.

Ronald E. Weant, 21, filling station attendant, of Girard, saved Harold E. Mullen, 9, William C. Moore, jr., 10, and Thomas R. Moore, 12, at Leavittsburg Jan. 27, 1937.

Charles C. Cole, 19-year-old schoolboy of Elyria, rescued Frank Crnko and Samuel Gjurasin, both 9, at Vincent May 27, 1939.

The commission report on the Weant case:

"The boys broke through ice on a pond into water seven feet deep 19 feet from the bank. From the opposite bank Weant waded and then swam 20 feet, breaking the ice ahead of him, to Harold. Taking hold of Harold, Weant swam three feet father and got hold of William. He then shoved William toward the bank, and a man in wadable water aided William. Weant then swam towing Harold six feet, and Harold was carried to the bank by another man. Weant then swam to Thomas, swam towing him eight feet to wadable water, and then carried him to the bank.

The Cole incident:

"Frank and Samuel fell into water 10 feet deep in a stone quarry, the walls of which rose vertically for five to 20 feet above the surface. From a rock projection Cole dived and swam 35 feet to a point between the the boys, who got hold of him around his neck and shoulders. To break the holds, Cole submerged, Samuel released his hold and Cole pushed Frank from him. The three rose separately.

"The boys again got hold of Cole, and he swam five feet to submerged rocks, on which the three then stood. Cole then swam towing Samuel 50 feet to the projection. He then swam 25 feet to Frank, who was being towed by another boy, and towed him to the projection."

ADJUTANT GENERAL DIES

WARNS GALION TO CONSERVE ON WATER SUPPLY

Utilities Superintendent Says Shortage Feared If Consumption Continues.

GALION — Citizens of Galion were warned Wednesday by Harry C. Dye, superintendent of public utilities here, to conserve on water.

He states that unless the water consumers stop the practice of allowing the city water to run to prevent pipes from freezing, there will be a shortage of water for normal purposes.

Throughout the city there has been a shortage of cistern water, and citizens are using hard water for laundry purposes and to fill cisterns. This extra use of water, besides the water being allowed to run to prevent freezing, has caused the situation of adequate water supply to become alarming.

NAMES COMMITTEE

GALION — Announcement was made Wednesday by Mayor W. M. King of the appointment of a committee to arrange for the dedication of the new city hall. The building will probably be dedicated early in February.

On the committee are: G. M. Badgley, O. W. Cronenwett, Thomas Maidens, Otto Snider and Albert N. Cox.

FROZEN METERS TO COST HOME OWNERS $1,200

City to Assess Repair Charges on 400 Water Units Frozen During Sub-Zero Spell.

The zero weather which has gripped the Mansfield area for the past week already has cost property owners $1,200 for meter repair service, James E. Warrack, superintendent of the municipal waterworks reported today.

Warrack said that more than 400 frozen meters, the largest number in the department's history, were replaced during the past seven days.

Of that total, 204 were replaced last Saturday by workmen who labored until midnight removing the bursted meters.

Warrack said the repair costs per meter ranged from $2 to $4 and would be billed to property owners on their next water bill.

He reported that the number of frozen meters had dropped off in the past two days and that only about 15, the average number, were replaced yesterday.

Appointed Pumpman.

At the same time Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton announced the probationary appointment of John C. Ford, 37 Wood street, a former state highway worker, to the position of pumpman in the water department.

He will replace Charles Post, appointed last June by former Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist. Post was transferred to a laboring position in the department.

Three other shifts in the waterworks staff, effective today resulted in the transfer of two shop meter repairmen to the outside repair service, and an outside repairman was transferred inside.

Those transferred outside were William Boley and Ralph Gant. Shifted from outside repair to the shop was Paul Warner.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS EASY TO DETECT

U. S. Secret Service Agent Points Out Flaws With "Odds."

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Jim Maloney, head of the U. S. Secret Service in New York, threw a handful of bills on the desk and asked, "Can you let me have a fifty for these smaller denominations?"

The Coin, Currency and Credit Editor scribbled a quick sum on the back of his celluloid cuff and realized that Maloney proposed a fair if non-profitable exchange. For a fifty Maloney offered four $7 bills, two $6 bills, one $4 bill and two $3 bills.

Accordingly, the editor peeled a fifty from his roll. Maloney's bills went on the roll, the roll into a bandana handkerchief, the handkerchief into the editor's flannel undershirt where it was pinned securely.

"I gave you counterfeit notes—no better than cigar coupons," Maloney then said evenly.

The C. C. of C. editor hurriedly extracted the roll. Sure enough, across the face of each bill there was stamped in huge letters: "counterfeit." Banks had stamped them thus in retiring them from circulation.

Maloney declared:

"It's suckers like you who make treasury agents like me work so hard. You'd take bills of odd denomination. I've seen your kind sold rubber money."

Public Wises Up.

Maloney added, however, that the public gradually is becoming educated to the detection of counterfeits and that the amount of "funny money" in circulation has decreased steadily. In 1937 the loss through counterfeiting was $654,787 and in 1938 it dropped to $483,021. The year 1939 promises to be a record low. The number of arrests, meanwhile, have increased.

There are no "perfect" or "almost perfect" counterfeits, Maloney said. The paper is obviously inferior. The color is not constant throughout since the government's secret inks can not be duplicated. Even without a magnifying glass, counterfeits can be detected by the dullness of points on the treasury seal, the irregular spacing and flaws in the lettering and serial numbers.

JAPAN'S HASTE POINTS TOWARD COMPLICATIONS

Eagerness to Secure Moscow Treaty Presents Dilemma to Communists.

(Editor's Note: The important role being played by Soviet Russia in the war between China and Japan is discussed in dev 'l in the following article, fourth in a series of six cabled to New York by James R. Young, Far Eastern manager of International News Service, just before his detention in Tokyo. Young recently concluded a 9,000 mile tour of China in which he visited Japanese-occupied areas and the interior, where Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is still holding out against the invaders.)

By JAMES R. YOUNG,
(INS Staff Correspondent)

Japan's haste to conclude some form of agreement with Moscow may lead her foreign office into further international complications of a serious nature.

This is the qualified view of influential Chinese leaders in Chungking, the new capital of independent China, whom I interviewed at length in the course of a 9,000-mile journey through China.

Assertions made in a signed article by Toshio Shiratori, former Japanese ambassador to Rome and ex-foreign office spokesman, appearing in the Hochi newspaper in Tokyo, were read with interest in Chungking, but his enthusiasm, Chinese say, is believed to be sweeping him off his feet if he thinks that Soviet Russia would end her aid to China.

Foreign diplomats in China state that over-emphasis has been laid on Soviet political encroachments on China's sovereignty.

Shiratori, known as the stormy petrel of foreign office days during the Manchurian affair, is misleading his public it is claimed in Chine, when he says a rapprochement with Moscow means that the Soviets will alter their far eastern policy.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his associates are anti-Soviet. A few parlor pinks and intellectuals in Chungking lean toward Communism, but would, it is pointed out, lean toward almost any "ism" if it would keep them in the limelight.

The northwest Communist area and the famous Eighth Route army are Communist in name, but like the Minseito party in Japan, their main interest is reorganizing the farm situation.

"Japan's most urgent question is how to adjust relations with the Soviet union and how to make the Soviets end their aid to Chiang Kai-Shek," Shiratori said in his Hochi article.

"Japan should hasten to conclude an agreement. The United States and Great Britain are not in a position to use force and prevent Japan from constructing a new order in Asia."

Viewed from Chungking and judging from interviews among the foreign and Chinese colony, Japan and her efforts to obtain a rapprochement as eagerly desired by Shiratori will suffer ill effects afterward.

Firstly, this is an open admission of internal weakness in Japan. Moscow officials must be grinning, the Chinese say, to hear of Japan's sudden solicitation. Japan must be desperate to lean so suddenly toward Moscow.

Support Lacking.

Secondly, neither the Japanese Kwantung army or other elements in Japan would give hearty support to the Moscow agreement. These sections well know, it is claimed here, that Moscow could not guarantee and need not offer such guarantees to "bind itself against promoting Communism in the Far East and agree to abandon its policy of assisting the Chiang Kai-Shek regime," as Shiratori demands.

Thirdly, the present aid to China is mutual—a credit arrangement involving, possibly, between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 by Moscow in return for which China supplies minerals, hides, wool, oil, tungsten, and similar supplies.

Neither Moscow nor Chungking, for commercial reasons, would abandon each other. On the other hand Chungking will see that Communist influence does not dominate the Kuomintang party. Communism and the Kuomintang are incompatible. The Communist element goes on unhindered, but in a modified form, in Sian and the northwest. Moscow will not abandon her very strategic and valuable commercial and political back door connections with China, in favor of Japan, for any or all treaties with Tokyo, it is pointed out.

Moscow is not under obligation to do so.

Foreign observers who have followed the Chinese government from Nanking to Hankow, thence to Chungking, smiled at Shiratori's Hichi statement that "Japan would repay Germany and Italy for their assistance to Japan at the time of the outbreak of the China incident."

Germany more than any third power, helped China rather than Japan at the outbreak of the China incident, with advisers, equipment and credit and moral support, in spite of the anti-Comintern pact. This assistance was responsible for the Chinese government's holding out. The aid was greater than the over-rated help of England or France.

Germany's assistance marked the first period of the incident where third powers were backing China against Japan. The second period covered the break-down of peace negotiations, paralleling commercial assistance by the Germans, including Italian aid and foreign credits from other powers. The third and present period is marked by increased products at low cost, and aid from the United States in the way of credits against export goods to the American market.

As for the new order described by Shiratori, in every sense of the word there is disorder everywhere, including the Japanese occupied areas.

"Rapprochement with the Soviets does not mean Japan accepts Communism," the former spokesman wrote. Chinese in Chungking say "Japan will find herself leaning over the edge of a precipice, if she bends toward Moscow on one hand and demands that Wang Ching-Wei in Shanghai, through his proposed government, shout against the Comintern. It seems impossible diplomacy to deal with Moscow in this vein."

AGENTS TRAIL HIGHER-UPS AS PROBE GOES ON

Federal Investigator Says Grand Jury to Stay in Session Till April.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The department of justice was on the trail today of "several" individuals who are the higher powers behind "certain organizations" working toward overthrow of the government.

Henry O'Donnell, special assistant to the attorney general, conducting the special district of Columbia federal grand jury investigation of subversive foreign-agent activities, said:

"The question being asked is why we haven't indicted the big-name leaders of these organizations. The answer is: we're not after the so-called big-name leaders.

"They are merely a bunch of Charlie McCarthy's for the higher-ups whose names are not generally known to the public.

"These men are the real objects of our investigation."

A number of well-known Communist leaders have been indicted since the federal drive against espionage, sabotage and related illegal activities opened. Among these was Earl Browder, party leader in this country, convicted in New York Thursday for passport irregularities. Browder's brother, William, testified before the grand jury here.

"We could indict these so-called big names any time we wanted to," O'Donnell asserted.

Makes Other Disclosures.

Among other disclosures made by the youthful former Chicago lawyer were:

1. Agents of at least one major nation, other than Russia, are under investigation by the grand jury. He would not identify the nation.

2. The daily publication (he withheld the name) of a large subversive group in this country is being investigated by the department. Certain officials of the publication are believed to be using ficticious names in making required legal reports.

3. The headquarters of another allegedly foreign-sponsored group has been moved into a country bordering the United States so that, according to O'Donnell, "we can't catch sight of any of them to shoot at." (He also did not disclose the name of this group).

O'Donnell said the grand jury investigation here, scheduled to continue until April, was being used as a clearing house for espionage and sabotage information for the entire country.

Thousands Bow As Funeral Train Of Borah Ends Trip

BOISE, Ida.—(AP)—William E. Borah, who went to the national capital a generation ago as United States senator from this small Pacific northwest state, returned today with a nation mourning his death.

Grief strained faces greeted the mourning-draped funeral train during two brief stops in eastern Idaho last night on its way from Washington, where the venerable statesman died last Friday after a cerebral hemorrhage.

Despite sub-freezing temperatures, thousands thronged the Boise railway station as the train reached the end of its journey this morning. The casket was taken to the state capitol rotunda.

Senator D. Worth Clark, commenting on the crowds which met the train on the trip from Washington, D.C., said:

"I don't believe there has been a greater tribute paid to any president of the United States under similar circumstances."

In the spacious rotunda of Idaho's capitol a place was made where the thousands who have come to Boise to pay their last respects might pass the unpretentious casket. Military guards were assigned.

There are original manuscripts of poems scribbled on note paper, typewritten copies ready to be submitted to publishers, and copies of the poems after they were printed in magazines and poetry anthologies. Her poems have appeared in many different national magazines. One of them, "Don't Pass Him Bye," which was published in Good Housekeeping, appears superimposed on a print of an aged man. This picture and the poem is being used as a symbol of old age dependents in all social security and relief offices in Indiana.

OFFERS TO PAY $10,000 RANSOM

Los Angeles Chef Believes Son, 16, Was Kidnaped; Tells of Getting Letters.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES — Believing his son Arnold, 16, had been kidnaped, Avon D. Hutzen, Los Angeles chef, declared today he was willing to pay $10,000 in ransom supposedly demanded by the kidnapers.

Hutzen said his son vanished December 5 and the same night the father received a telephone call from a man, reciting the numbers of the missing boy's watch, instructed Hutzen to meet him.

Accompanied by a police officer, Hutzen went to the designated spot, but no one appeared although a "suspicious" looking car drove by several times without stopping.

Two days later, according to the father's story, he received a letter demanding $10,000 and asking why he had gone to the meeting point with another person.

On January 11, Hutzen said, he received a letter ordering him, under threat of death to himself, his wife and son, to take $10,000 to the lobby of a Long Beach hotel last Tuesday night. No one met him at the hotel, he said.

Both Los Angeles police and the federal bureau of investigation are working on the case, but no trace of the missing boy has been found.

CLUBS SPONSOR FORUM AGAIN THIS YEAR ON WORLD AFFAIRS

Another of the Institute of International Understanding forum series is to be held in Mansfield on the four Monday evenings of February, sponsored by the Rotary and University clubs, it was announced today by Lewis F. Hartman, chairman of committee on arrangements.

This is the third season in Mansfield for these institute meetings, which are held in the Senior high school auditorium. An address by a competent speaker on world affairs is followed at each session by a discussion period during which the speaker answers questions related to the subject of the talk.

Originated by Rotary International, as a part of its contribution to the advancement of international understanding, good will and peace "through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service," these institutes have gained increasing public attention in many cities and last year's sessions in Mansfield attracted a large attendance.

In their community service work the Mansfield University and Rotary clubs meet the cost of the institute sessions and there is no admission charge here, although a charge is customary in a number of cities in which the institutes are held.

Offering an adult study course in international affairs, the institute also gives opportunity for high school students to become informed on the same subjects, as each of the speakers is scheduled for a talk at Senior high school on the day of the meeting.

Other Mansfield clubs and organizations are being extended an invitation to be represented at the institute sessions, in addition to the general public invitation to all interested in the subjects that will be discussed.

First of the institute sessions is to be on Monday night, Feb. 5, at 8 o'clock, with Marcelle C. Miller, of Portsmouth, Va., speaking on the subject, "Problems In the Far East." Subjects of other talks in the series will be: "The Changing Scene In Europe," "The Influence of Aviation In International Relations," and "Can a Peaceful World Order Be Organized?"

CHINESE REPORT ENEMY THROWN FOR HEAVY LOSS

Take 27 Tanks, 12 Field Guns After 20,000 Nippon Troops Fall in Trap.

(By United Press)

SHANGHAI, China — Chinese dispatches asserted today that 13,000 Japanese soldiers had been killed in a week-long battle on the borders of Hupeh and Honan provinces in Central China and that the "remnants" of the Japanese engaged were retreating.

Chinese had trapped 20,000 of the Japanese in all, according to a Chinese Central News agency dispatch from Chungking, the Chinese temporary capital. The fight was said to have been in Suihsien sector of the provincial border.

It was asserted that the Chinese captured 27 tanks and 12 field guns.

This claim to a big Chinese victory had come after earlier dispatches of the Central agency, asserted that 4,000 Japanese had been killed in a fight at Kaocheng, in western Anhwei province, which is to the east of the scene of the engagement reported today.

A second Central agency dispatch from Chungking alleged that 300 Japanese soldiers mutinied Jan. 20 at Lintsin, in Shansi province in northwest China, killed 30 officers and then surrendered to the Chinese after a fight with other Japanese troops who tried to restore discipline.

The dispatch asserted that anti-war spirit was spreading in the Japanese lines.

Japanese authorities here denied the report of the mutiny. They said that at many places Japanese troops were fraternizing with Chinese troops.

BECKLEY GAINS

War Vet Improves at Dayton; J. E. Ports Also Reported Better.

Walter L. Beckley, manager of Cities Service Oil company in Mansfield, is improving at the Dayton Veterans hospital, where he underwent a serious operation last week.

He has been at the hospital for two weeks and expects to remain three weeks longer. J. Earl Ports, former mayor of Mansfield, who is also at the hospital receiving treatment for a heart condition, is reported to be somewhat improved.

Both men are veterans of the World war. Both served overseas and both have served as commander of McVey Post, American Legion. Ports at one time was quartermaster general of the Ohio National Guard.

Pegler Suggests a Few Changes In A. F. of L. That Might Be of Benefit

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Constructive suggestions are not my specialty, but if Will Green of the American Federation of Labor is short of ideas he might try these on for size:

First off, I would rewrite the constitution of the American Federation of Labor so as to permit the national body to govern its component units. It may be argued that this would centralize power, but, after all, in any organization or state there must be responsibility and authority at the top, and if you have able and conscientious men in the top positions there is no need to be alarmed.

To obtain the best possible ability and character for the higher positions, I would limit the salaries and expense allowances provided for these jobs, forbid all such officers to engage in other occupations or business activities and compel them to file statements of their assets when they took office.

I would require them to file duplicates of their income tax returns with the A. F. of L. treasury, with the plain understanding that any officer who reported outside income would have to explain where he got it.

Anyone who received commissions on sales of material or insurance or bonds written for employers would be subject to impeachment, but I would provide very good salaries—say about $40,000 for the national president and as much as $25,000 a year for the president of international unions, in recognition of the fact that ability and integrity are worth something.

Martyrs are all right in holy wars, but the A. F. of L. needn't be at war with business. It is now big enough to do business with business for the mutual advantage of labor and business and needs executives. Martyrs always feel that they are doing favors for labor, and these executives should be given to understand that they are well paid for their work. I would establish terms of four or six years, too, so that they wouldn't have to spend all their time in office compromising, chiseling and campaigning for re-election.

I would abolish the extortionate initiation fees and excessive dues now required in the A. F. of L. and get down to the level of the CIO. The permit racket would be abolished, too. This is the racket whereby musclemen in the executive spots license non-union men to do union work and steal the license fees, while union members walk the streets.

Under this system it is better to be a non-union man than a member in good standing, and permit men are carried permanently on the permit basis so that they will kick in regularly to the grafters.

All officers who handle money would be placed under bond, which would mean that criminals would be automatically excluded from such positions, because they are not acceptable risks. And I would not wait for local prosecutors or the department of justice to take the initiative in cases of graft, assault or murder, but would demand that they take action for labor's own good.

I wouldn't denounce public officials as enemies of labor for proceeding against crooks in the unions. Prosecutors, being politicians, hesitate to go after union racketeers, even when they have good evidence, because they are afraid of being smeared as enemies of labor at election time.

If an employer reported a union official or agent for demanding money to prevent or end a strike or to stand off or compromise a proposed increase in the wage scale I would protect the employer from reprisals and press the prosecution.

Of course, I would comb out all the known racketeers and white-graft chiselers of the present official roster. That would include not only the low types, such as Bioff and Scalese, but anyone with a side line of insurance or supplies who could be shown to have done business with an employer. Side lines would be absolutely out. If the salary for the job were not sufficient for the man I would get another man. In this way I would prevent grafters from using their labor connections to promote their private interests.

I would abandon the pretense that the A. F. of L. didn't know that criminals and non-criminals but extremely unethical grafters were high up in the organization, admit that this condition developed in the rough-and-ready days of unionism and in the rowdy scuffle with the CIO, and, in a manner of speaking, take a plea.. I would simply say that those days were gone and that we had now turned square.

Never again would I permit the A. F. of L. to dishonor labor by defending racketeers. It isn't the job of the A. F. of L. to protect racketeers but to protect labor from racketeers, and by affirming this I would win the confidence of members, the favor of the general public and peace with victory in the fight with the CIO.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Educational, these vacations.

This one of mine was spent far away from it all. Little Ohio farm, where the snow came one night and left the countryside a miracle of cold white and black, bare trees.

The folks had heard of Hollywood. Sometimes, even, they went to pictures. They liked Mickey Rooney and they remembered Ann Sothern and they were awfully sorry to hear about Doug Fairbanks.

"Sudden, wasn't it?" they said. And "Too bad—he made a lot of good pictures."

Most of the people I met (and they were city people from 'way back) planned to see "Gone With the Wind" when they got around to it—but there were one or two who thought they'd prefer it trimmed down to sitting-size before they'd undertake to mosey over for a look-see.

Nobody, much, talked about pictures, except to evince polite interest in my work out here.

Nobody cared that Sam Goldwyn was feuding with United Artists—in fact, I doubt that anybody had heard about it. Here in Hollywood, though, that controversy is "colossal" and fraught with import. It's very important to Sam, and to United Artists, and to Warner Bros., but to the people that lay it on the box-office line it's a bore—as it should be. Back here, it's hot stuff that Sam, with a UA contract until 1945, has been supposed to be looking for "outside" release on his big western—with WB the outsider on the inside track. Back there, they don't give a hang who releases what—back there the Westerner had just better be good or they'll tell their friends to save their nickels and where will that leave Sam?

Back in this land of perpetual sunshine (where it's raining and greyer than the morning after) it's hard to catch up on the Hollywood parade. There was a supercolossal umpty-ump gala premiere too, of this "Gone With the Wind" thing—a premiere to end premieres, they say, but I know they're being optimistic about that.

Looking over the interesting pieces done for me by tender-hearted friends among the screen-writers, I find a quick alibi necessary along with thanks to them. Several of the guest contributors to this space threw in sly suggestions that turn-about is fair play, i.e., they having obliged Coons, Coons should pinch-hit for them in such simple matters as (1)—contributing a song lyric to Mr. Frank Loesser, (2)—sketching up a Jack Benny skit for Messrs. Eddie Beolin and Bill Morrow, and (3)—doing a novel or two for Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements.

These, of course, would be simple matters for this department, and I would be happy to take a few moments after lunch to dash off the required pieces. However, I'll be blind before the week is out—blind from catching up on those new movies, and the newer ones which keep coming up. Blind, I can't write (1) song, or (2) skit, or (3) novel, but I can say "Thanks a lot—it was good of you."
